Two Slayings In Chicago Speed Crime Investigation

Senate Unit Orders Hearing There Oct. 5; Broader Probe Now Expected as Result

CHICAGO, Sept. 26 (AP).—A United States Senate crime investigating committee stepped up its work today after a bloody challenge from Chicago's underworld—the gang-style slaying of two investigators.

The committee reportedly hastened its scheduled investigation of Chicago underworld activities, setting a hearing here for October 5.

George S. Robinson, the committee's Chicago agent, said the group had not planned to come here until later. He said he expects the Chicago inquiry now will blossom into a full-scale investigation.

The committee issued more than a dozen summonses for persons to testify. An authoritative source said they included:

Jack Guzik, John Patton, former "boy mayor" of Burnham; Tony Accardo, alias Joe Batters, former Capone aide; the three Fischetti brothers, Charles, Rocco and Joe, cousins of Al Capone; Phil Katz and Hymie (Loudmouth) Levin.

There was new evidence, meanwhile, of a possible link in the two killings.

The victims, killed last night about four hours apart, were William J. Drury, 48, a former police lieutenant once known as "the watchdog of the Loop," and Marvin J. Bas, 45, a lawyer.

Luis Kutner, prominent Chicago lawyer, told newsmen today Drury telephoned Bas from Kutner's office August 18, making an appointment to meet him immediately to "talk about that thing we have been working on." Kutner, who said he was Drury's lawyer, said he did not know the nature of the matter.

Both Drury and Bas had offered information on underworld activities to John E. Babb, Republican candidate for sheriff. Babb said Bas had submitted one written report on crime to him and was preparing a second. Babb said he was to have conferred today with Drury on information the former police officer had volunteered.

Drury was killed in his garage by four shotgun blasts fired through the windshield of his Cadillac sedan. The killers either lay in wait or followed his car when he drove into a dark alley to his garage.

Ironically, Drury was killed

Beat Fear of God Into Mean Wife, Rare Bible Says

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 26 (U.P.).—A rare Bible that carries a notation authorizing a husband to beat his disobedient wife has been added to the University of Illinois library, it was announced today.

The book was published in 1551. At the end of the third chapter of the first book of St. Peter is written:

"And if she be not obedient and helpful unto him, to beat the fear of God into her head."

A university librarian believes the phrase probably was added by a translator whose wife was troublesome and who wanted "Bibical sanction" for punishing her.

Post Ad Helps to Ease Teacher Shortage

This is how it happened. A former schoolteacher, who is now a Silver Spring housewife, wanted to return to teaching.

But she was having difficulty in finding someone to care for her home and children during the day. Then she thought of placing a classified ad in The Washington Post.

A few hours after the ad ran, she chose a settled woman from the numerous applicants, and she has been able to return to teaching.

If you need household help, full or part time, take a lesson from this smart schoolteacher. Call NAtional 4200 and place a classified ad in The Washington Post.

Foundation Aims

Ford to Use Huge Fund For Mankind

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The enormous wealth of the Ford Foundation will be devoted to projects dealing with "man's relations to man"—to activities on social rather than physical problems—its trustees announced yesterday.

The trustees' statement on areas for the organization's action is a step preliminary to the foundation's beginning of operations on a large scale. Though it was set up in 1936 by Henry Ford, it has not yet functioned in the same broad way as similar endowed bodies, such as the Carnegie and Rockefeller Foundations.

The decision of Ford trustees to dispense their funds on projects exclusively in the social sciences—government, education, communications, economics, and human conduct—sets it apart from the others.

Furthermore, it is probably more richly endowed than any other such foundation. Its assets have been estimated at from 250 to 300 million dollars.

The job of heading the organization has been offered to Paul G. Hoffman, who leaves his job as Marshall Plan administrator this week.

Douglas Quits; Gifford Seen as London Envoy

Lewis W. Douglas resigned yesterday as Ambassador to Great Britain for "personal considerations, including those of health."

(Walter Gifford, former president of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., was mentioned last night as having been selected by President Truman to succeed Douglas. Gifford told The Washington Post by telephone from his New York home: "I can't discuss that. You'll have to get that from Washington."—Editor's Note.)

Reports had been current for many months that Ambassador Douglas wanted to give up his post at the Court of St. James's. In April, 1949, a fish hook pierced his left eye while he was fishing along the River Test in Hampshire. A cataract developed, and Douglas underwent three operations.

Douglas was wearing a black patch over his injured eye when he called at the White House yesterday to confer with President Truman.

Mr. Truman accepted Douglas' resignation with "most genuine regret," effective November 1. He praised him for most "faithfully and efficiently" carrying on his duties in London for the last three and a half years, and also for the "great courage and devotion" he had shown in staying at his post after his health began to trouble him. He said he hoped he could call on Douglas for further service at "some early date."

Douglas, in his letter of resignation, made two points, saying:

"The first is that a continuing close relationship between our country and the people of the British Isles and of the British Commonwealth of Nations, even though that relationship has now become somewhat merged with international organization in which we all play a part and which we all support, is one of the solid

More Price Rises Seen By Winter

Clothing, Television Increases to Lead Upward Trend, D. C. Retail Survey Shows

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

With victory in sight in Korea, what's happening to the cost of things we buy in Washington? And what's likely to happen?

A survey of merchants by The Washington Post indicated:

1. That prices are still rising in varying degrees—food prices are rather steady, some merchandise definitely is higher, other items are still holding price lines of a couple of months ago.
2. That store officials generally feel more price rises are coming, both on reorders of fall merchandise and on the spring goods they will be ordering in the next few weeks.
3. That you can walk into any Washington store and be reasonably certain of finding the item you want. Exceptions include television sets, refrigerators, autos, certain building supplies.
4. That America's tremendous production machine is turning out more civilian goods than ever before; that military requirements still are mostly on paper but that the effect will be felt in a few more months.

All in all, it looks like the biggest Christmas in history coming up, plenty of things to buy but prices higher on practically everything than they were a year ago.

But after Christmas—

Most merchants in Washington shudder at that. People who sell men's suits or women's clothes, for example, point to spiraling raw wool prices. Those who sell electrical appliances and other metal-using equipment talk about tank and aircraft production plans.

Scare Buying Over.

Everyone seems to agree that the quick scare buying is over.

From now to the end of the year is when food prices normally dip, due to such factors as the annual fall pigs' slaughter. The economists think food prices ought to be pretty steady the rest of 1950.

Here are opinions of some Washington business people:

P. M. Talbot of Woodward & Lothrop, chairman of the department store division of the Merchant and Manufacturers Association, said there are currently "no unusual difficulties" in obtaining goods but that there is "reluctance" by manufacturers to quote "firm prices very far ahead" on such things as furniture and kitchenware. He predicted higher prices "later on" for bedding and furniture. Men's clothing prices, he estimated, are up from 5 to 9 percent over a year ago.

An official of a large radio-television store chain said TV makers have dealers on an allocation basis through Christmas. "After that nobody has any idea."

Oscar Dodek of D. J. Kaufman Inc., chairman of the men's wear division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said most retail prices were unchanged from last fall.

A. J. Kaplowitz of Kaplowitz Bros., chairman of the women's wear division of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association, said "some shortages are now developing in the better woolens and piece goods." Fall prices are not changed much from last fall but spring prices will certainly be higher, he said.

Malik Rages; British Seek Korea Peace

Soviet Truculence Revived in U. N.; New China Bombing Incident Protested

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The Soviet Union slipped back into its familiar tactics of truculence in the United Nations today after four days of comparative mildness and good will.

Its permanent delegate here, Jacob A. Malik, denounced the United States for "barbarous" bombings in Korea, snarled the Security Council for almost two hours with procedural objections, and in general behaved as he did when he was president of the Council during August.

Malik did not prevent the Council from recommending the admission of Indonesia as the sixtieth member of the United Nations. The vote was 10 in favor and none opposed, Malik voting with the United States and his other Western adversaries in favor of admission.

Nationalists Abstain

Nationalist China abstained, on the ground that Indonesia's recognition of Communist China showed its unfitness for membership.

Malik's tactics today, and those of other Soviet and satellite spokesmen in the Assembly, suggested that the Russians were still more interested in extracting a propaganda advantage in Asia than in trying to wind up its Korean war.

Up to this evening the Russians had made no direct or indirect overture to start discussing a Korean settlement.

Contents Not Decided

Meanwhile, the British delegation went ahead, with American approval, consulting other non-Soviet delegations on a resolution that would put the Assembly on record on the future of Korea. The British are working to get this resolution before the Assembly quickly, so that it will be passed by the time the fighting ends.

Its exact contents have not yet been decided, but the resolution is sure to call for (1) a unified Korea, (2) elections under U. N. auspices in the North and South alike, and (3) authority for U. N. supervision of the North until an all-Korean democratic government can be established. This will imply permission for Gen. Douglas MacArthur to go north of the Thirty-eighth Parallel if necessary.

American bombing north of the Parallel produced a new admission from the United States today that American planes "may have" again bombed Chinese territory in error. The Chinese Communist government had protested a second bombing of the Manchurian town of Antung, just within the Chinese border.

25,000 Reds Expected To Escape

Officers Here Say U. N. Must Decide If Foe Is to Be Pursued Above 38th Parallel

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Top military men here say the Red Army in South Korea is defeated, but expect some portion of it—perhaps 25,000 to 30,000 troops—to escape to North Korea.

The capture of Seoul and linkup of the Tenth Corps with American forces charging up from the South doom the six Red divisions on the western side of the old perimeter front, they agreed. That means the end of organized resistance in South Korea is in sight, though some tough and costly mopping up operations probably lie ahead in the southwest and in the blazing capital.

But the six Red divisions on the north front of the Pusan perimeter have not been enveloped and are in full flight northward. While reports are fragmentary, it is regarded as certain that a considerable portion of them have retreated over secondary mountain roads east of Seoul and are, or soon will be, north of the Thirty-eighth Parallel.

This again poses the long unanswered question of whether we move over the border into North Korea to finish the job.

The only answer available from American officials is that this is a question to be decided by the United Nations. They won't discuss our own attitude. The Army favors wiping out the enemy—going over the border if necessary—so the job does not have to be done again.

Of course, there are other considerations. Some top officials at the Pentagon and other high places here have argued that if U. N. forces actually fight their way across the border, the legal doctrine of "hot pursuit" might seem a logical answer. Under that rule, police can chase a bandit across a border if capture is imminent.

But it appeared likely last night that the Reds might get a fourth or more of their army through the mountains to North Korea. Any really accurate estimate was impossible. The most recent order of battle maps placed the North Korean, Twelfth, Fifth, Eighth, Fifteenth, First and Thirteenth Divisions along the northern side of the Pusan perimeter from east to west.

Best guess is that some three quarters of the better divisions—which numbered 10,000 at full strength—might reach the border. But unless pursued and destroyed, this 25,000 to 30,000perhaps even 40,000—man force could keep the North Korean government from collapsing. This would put them in a better bargaining position and alter greatly the problem of a peace settlement.

'Lost Nerve at Moscow'

Truman Feels Byrnes Failed 'Miserable,' Daniels' Book Says

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

In an explosive book out today, President Truman is quoted as saying that James F. Byrnes "failed miserably" as Secretary of State in 1945-47, "lost his nerve in Moscow," and "ran out" when the diplomatic battle with Russia got rough.

Mr. Truman also is quoted as likening Stalin to Boss Tom Pendergast, and as saying he got the impression that Stalin would "stand by his agreements," but that he had "a Politburo on his hands like the Eightieth Congress."

The book is Jonathan Daniels' "The Man of Independence," published by Lippincott. Although frankly partisan, it is far and away the best biography of Harry S. Truman yet written. Daniels, a first-rate reporter and writer, has explained that the "chief source" of his material was the President himself.

There is much in the book that is new; or, at least, not well known. Late in 1939, it is brought out, President Franklin D. Roosevelt offered to appoint the then Senator Truman to the Interstate Commerce Commission, believing that he had no chance to win the Democratic nomination for a second term in the Senate. Mr. Truman, angry, spurned the ICC offer, went on to triumph over his political foes in Missouri, and four years later took the path to the White House by becoming FDR's running mate.

But it is Mr. Truman's rawhiding of Byrnes that stands out in "The Man of Independence." Here is what Daniels quotes him as saying about his one-time friend:

"He failed miserably as Secretary of State, and ran out on me when the going was very rough and when I needed him worst. His 'bad heart' has now left him when he has found that he made a bad guess. So he and old Baruch have joined the McCormicks, Hearsts and Scripps-Howards to discredit me. They will not succeed."

This harsh appraisal concerns the man Mr. Truman went to Chicago to nominate for the Vice Presidency in 1944 when the prize was thrust upon himself. Apparently, a certain amount of hostility existed between them from the time Mr. Truman moved into the White House. He says, for example, that when he offered Byrnes the State Department post in 1945, the South Carolinian "al-

Money Still Sought

$4000 'Holdup' a Hoax; Victim, 2 Pals Charged With Larceny

Washington had another "perfect crime" Monday.

At least three teen-age youths who planned it thought it was.

But, as with most "perfect crimes," something went wrong. Yesterday, the boys were charged with grand larceny because the police figured their holdup was a "phony."

One of the three is a 17-year-old messenger for the Standard Drug Co., 3929 Minnesota ave. ne. On Monday he was taking $4000 in company funds to the bank when the "holdup" occurred.

He and two pals had figured it this way: The confederates would pounce on the messenger, beat him and leave him unconscious, then escape. The messenger would "come to" later and permit himself to be discovered. After the excitement calmed down the gang would split the loot.

Things went off on schedule at first. The messenger left the drug store with the $4000. But one of his "assailants" had not arrived when the other, apparently panicked, grabbed the money and ran for the woods in the 3900 block of Minnesota ave.

The messenger told police he thought he had been "double-crossed." He immediately gave the alarm, and the youth was found in the woods within fifteen minutes. Later, they implicated the third youth, who, they said, had done most of the planning for the holdup.

The money still has not been recovered. Yesterday, one of the boys showed them where he said he had hidden it in the woods but police said they found nothing there.

Marine Tank Men Get Groggy Firing Guns in Close Combat

By Tom Lambert

SEOUL, Sept. 26 (AP).—United States Marine tank crews, leading the battle up Seoul's main street today, fired until they were groggy from fumes in close-quarter combat.

The armored force, ramrod of the drive toward the blazing capital's heart, blasted sandbagged roadblocks with 90-mm guns. It plowed through burning debris to a point near the French consulate this afternoon.

Hours after the first announcement by the Tenth Army Corps of Seoul's liberation, the Leathernecks fought a desperate duel with Red tanks in the smoke-filled city. Seven enemy tanks were knocked out.

(Associated Press Correspondent Bill Ross, a few blocks away, placed the figure at 11, apparently in the same battle).

Behind the American tanks Marines stalked warily down the littered streets, their weapons ready. They ducked into doorways and fired at unseen Red snipers who have the advantage of cover and the chance to fire the first shot.

If the city was liberated as General MacArthur had announced, the remaining North Korean defenders did not know it. This correspondent saw the Reds stage small counterattacks by walking boldly down the middle of fire-swept streets.

Hundreds of rounds of artillery and mortar fire, and the stout-hearted resistance of Marines who refused to budge, enabled American armor to beat off the enemy tank assault.

Leathernecks held their ground even when Red tanks blasted sandbag defenses down on top of them.

Maj. Edwin H. Simmons, Paulsboro, N. J., heavy weapons officer for one Marine battalion, said the Leathernecks hit the counter-attacking Reds "with everything we had."

Simmons was preparing an artillery barrage to precede a 2 a. m. Marine attack. His command post was on a slight hill overlooking the main north road into Seoul, along which the attack was to be launched.

"At 1:45 I heard tanks coming down the street," he said. "I flashed the battalion command post and grabbed for a radio to notify the Marines on the barricade in the street.

"Then the first Red 85-mm. shell hit. I told the barricade that tanks were coming, then dived into the cellar of a house, calling for my radio man. He had been killed by that first shell."

In the next few minutes Marine 81-mm. mortars fired 650 rounds and the 105-mm. artillery guns about 900 rounds. They were joined by fire from 155s and 4.2 mortars, and from Marines with machine guns, 75-mm. recoilless guns and 3.5 bazookas.

Simmons said the Reds drove

12 Nations Agree on Creation Of Combined European Force

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (AP).—The North Atlantic Treaty Council tonight agreed on creating a combined defense force for protecting Western Europe against Soviet aggression and tossed to its defense ministers the problem of what to do about using German manpower in this setup.

The North Atlantic Council adjourned at 6:30 p. m. (EST) after two weeks of formal and informal sessions.

The Council's decision followed closely upon the agreement of the Big Three Foreign Ministers to end the state of war with Germany and authorize the formation of 30,000 or more highly-trained German military police to protect the western German zones from riots and disorder.

The major Council decisions were:

1. A combined force will be organized under the North Atlantic treaty organization subject to the political and strategic guidance exercised by the organization.
2. A supreme commander will be appointed with sufficient authority to insure that national units allocated to his command are organized and trained into an effective and integrated force in time of peace as well as in the event of war.

This force apparently is the one to which American units will be sent under the build-up program announced earlier this month by President Truman.

3. The supreme commander will be supported by an international staff representing all nations contributing to the force. Pending the appointment of the supreme commander, there will

BULLETIN

TOKYO, Sept. 27 (AP).—General MacArthur's headquarters announced today 400 United Nations prisoners of war were released in western Korea yesterday by advancing Allied troops.

By Relman Morin

TOKYO (Wednesday), Sept. 27 (AP).—A linkup of the two United Nations beachhead forces turned the Korean war today into a giant mopping-up operation.

Spearheads of American forces from the Inchon and Pusan beachheads met about midnight Tuesday near Osan, 30 miles south of war-ravaged Seoul.

American intelligence officers estimated 100,000 Reds, the bulk of the Communist army, were cut off by the linkup.

Cavalry in 115-Mile Dash

United States First Cavalry Division troops completed a 115-mile dash in five days and nights by contacting United States Seventh Division troops near Osan.

The linkup did not stretch a solid line of American troops from Taegu in the southeast to Osan. But it did sever most of the possible routes of escape for the shattered Red army. In small groups or, individually, some fleeing Reds probably will escape through the hills.

South Korean and American troops fanned out today over highways in South Korea toward cities which are communication points.

24th Division Near Taegon

The United States Twenty-fourth Division approached Taejon, whose occupation would seal a network of rail and highway routes. Taejon is nearly 90 miles south of Seoul.

United States Second and Twenty-fifth Division troops threatened to close a trap on about 30,000 men of three Communist divisions.

Second infantrymen swung south from Kochang, 65 miles northwest of Pusan. From Kochang, they advanced 7 miles toward the area where the Communists are.

Another arm of the trap was being extended toward Kochang from Chinju. Last reports placed Twenty-fifth Division troops 30 miles northwest of Chinju.

Kochang and Chinju are only

Our Smoke May Go Today, But Haze Will Replace It

The Weather Bureau hopes the Washington area sky will be free of the Canadian smoke overcast today.

But even if it does, Washingtonians still won't see much sun. The forecast calls for increasing cloudiness with a high about 72 degrees. Early morning temperatures were expected to range from 50 in the city to 44 in the suburbs.

The Scots yesterday seemed to have had a taste of the overcast. The Associated Press in Edinburgh reported thousands called observatories and weather bureaus about the "perfect pale blue sphere in the western sky."

The overcast, which spread from smouldering forest fires in Canada, first arrived here last Sunday.

House Unit Plans Full Draft Inquiry

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The House Armed Services Committee will open an inquiry into the operations of the Selective Service System and the Army's use of manpower at a public hearing Thursday.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), said the committee would make a sweeping investigation into Army manpower problems, needs, and utilization.

The committee, he said would attempt to resolve the dispute between the Army and Selective Service over preinduction tests. Draft officials charge that too many selectees are being rejected by the Army for failure to pass mental qualification examinations.

Other military mobilization activities yesterday:

Asks Employer Aid

Col. Daniel O. Omer, general counsel of Selective Service, urged employers not to ask for deferment of draft-age men (19 through 25) except in the most critical jobs. He also asked employers to use as many World War II physical disability rejectees as possible. He said it's not likely that men over 26 will be subject to the draft in any forseeable time.

The Navy let it be known it expects to call up more than 15,000 line and specialist officers as it continues its buildup operations. Some 5000 of these reservists will be ordered to active duty in the near future.

The Marine Corps announced it has completed calling up its organized reserve ground units—138 separate units in 126 cities.

Locally, 60 draftees—the District's fourth Korean war contingent—are due to be inducted into the Army today at Arlington Farms.

Twenty-two draftees who failed to show up for preinduction examinations have also been ordered up for induction today. Should these "missing" men fail to appear for the induction, the Federal Bureau of Investigation will be asked to find them. The FBI is already seeking to locate 44 "missing" draftees in Virginia and seven in Maryland.

Delinquent draftees face prosecution or immediate induction.

"Unwarranted"

Doctors Told To Fight Fear Of Death Rays

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Washington doctors were urged yesterday to help dispel "unwarranted public fear" of death rays accompanying atom-bomb explosions.

Such fear has been overdeveloped because of the mystery of rays that can bring death without visible warning, said Brig. Gen. James P. Cooney of the Atomic Energy Commission's military applications division.

He spoke at the second of three sessions on "Medical Education for Atomic Defense," sponsored by the District Medical Society. Some 600 doctors, an equal number of nurses and about 200 dentists are attending the course.

General Cooney emphasized that only 15 percent of the fatalities in atom bomb blasts over Hiroshima and Nagasaki, Japan, were caused by ionizing rays loosed in the explosions. The other 85 percent of the deaths were due to blast and burn injuries.

Rays Are Fearsome

"But the public understands explosions and fire, and so the fear is centered on death rays," he said.

General Cooney estimated that about half of the Japanese fatalities due to the rays could have been averted with proper medical care. As to long-term effects of exposure to the radiations, he declared:

"I've seen the survivors of radiation sickness (in Japan) and I can tell you they are healthy and happy and have had babies. They're a lot better off than our boys in Walter Reed Hospital who were hurt by the more conventional weapons."

General Cooney also declared that latest knowledge of the rays gives added hope that the informed public can escape much of the radiation dosage by quick action.

Some 50 percent of the radiation dosage is issued within the first second, he said, 80 percent by the end of the tenth second and all within a minute and a half. The quick-acting, informed person, he pointed out, may find at least partial shelter, which might mean the difference between survival or death, he said.

No Permanent Sterility

A second speaker, Col. Elbert De Coursey, director of the Armed Forces Institute of Pathology here, attacked fears of sterilizing effects of the bomb radiations. No atom bomb survivors have been rendered permanently sterile, he said.

Colonel De Coursey said women recovered their fertility within three months and males in five months.

Yesterday's duplicate four-hour sessions of the course were given at the Interior Department Auditorium from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. and from 7 to 11 p. m. Concluding sessions are scheduled for Friday.

Plot to Overthrow Honduras Chief Told, 2 Held, 2 Flee

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras, Sept. 26 (U.P.).—Two Army officers were arrested and two opposition Liberal Party leaders took asylum in the Guatemalan Embassy after a recent abortive plot to overthrow Nationalist President Juan Manuel Galvez, it was disclosed today.

Local newspapers published for the first time the details of the plot, uncovered by the authorities September 13. Ricardo Estrada and Nicolas Castro were listed as the liberals heading the plot. Both are in the Guatemalan Embassy. Capt. Jesus Velasquez and Lieut. Rigoberto Diaz were arrested. They were officers in the Basic School of Arms being trained by an American Military Mission.

According to the published details, the two officers were to turn over to the ploters a quanity of arms. The rebels were to attack the Presidential Palace and the San Francisco Fortress simultaneously. President Galvez and former Dictator-President Tiburcio Carias were to be seized.

Velasquez and Diaz were arrested September 13, but Estrada and Castro evaded capture and went to the Embassy.

Truman Letter on Marines Is Being Offered at Auction

By the United Press

President Truman's famous letter calling the Marine Corps the Navy's police force with a propaganda machine "almost equal to Stalin's" went on the auction block yesterday.

Representative Gordon L. McDonough (R., Calif.), to whom the letter was sent, said he will sell it to the highest bidder, with no offers considered under $1000. In applying to insure it, he valued the missive at $10,000.

McDonough said he will turn over the proceeds to the Marine Corps League, the Marines' veterans organization that demanded and got both personal and written apologies from the President.

The league was willing to forgive and forget, but McDonough apparently wasn't.

Mr. Truman wrote McDonough in reply to the Congressman's proposal that the Marine Corps be given a bigger role in the defense picture, and its commandant placed on the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The President, besieged with similar demands, cracked back that the corps was and always will be the Navy's police force. He added the remark about Marine Corps "propaganda."

Since then McDonough has written Gen. George C. Marshall, the new Secretary of Defense, making a similar request. No reply has been made public, but the plea is expected to be turned down.

Beall said Representative McDonough (R., Calif.), to whom the letter was addressed, bought the policy.

AMERICA NEEDS MORE ALUMINUM

Again, as in 1940, the voices of complacency are droning: "We have plenty of aluminum . . . four times as much as before the last war."

We do have four times as much aluminum . . . BUT IT IS NOT ENOUGH! In 1940 Reynolds warned not enough. Now Reynolds repeats the warning in 1950: NOT ENOUGH!

In 1940, R. S. Reynolds challenged the same voices of complacency. Few listened. But Reynolds took action . . . a new plant built in just 5 months and 28 days, producing at full capacity well before Pearl Harbor! (With that plant, Reynolds brought competition into the U. S. aluminum industry for the first time in history.)

Now, today, we see the same danger signals as in 1940 . . . industrial customers starving for metals, civilian manufacturing slowing down, scrap prices soaring. The U. S. is consuming more aluminum than its present capacity production . . . importing more and more from Canada. The needs for industry and for defense . . . Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force . . . are steadily mounting.

President Truman in his preparedness speech to the nation on September 9th said that we must enlarge "our capacity to produce basic materials such as . . . aluminum . . ."

We agree with the President! . . .
America needs more aluminum . . . made in the United States!

REYNOLDS METALS COMPANY, RICHMOND 19, VA., LOUISVILLE 1, KY.

NATIONAL SECURITY REQUIRES ALUMINUM EXPANSION IN OUR OWN COUNTRY!

It is proposed, in some quarters, that instead of building new aluminum plants in the U. S., we subsidize Canadian expansion again . . . BUT—

(1) The Canadian source of supply is entirely concentrated in one area—much more vulnerable to enemy bombing than the U. S. plants, which are dispersed among 10 states: Alabama, Arkansas, Illinois, Louisiana, New York, North Carolina, Oregon, Tennessee, Texas, Washington.

(2) New aluminum capacity can be built now in the United States, using natural gas, coal or hydro-power for electrical energy. This will further disperse the production centers of this country, and create more aluminum for peacetime as well as defense needs.

(3) America should promote U. S. employment and U. S. prosperity—develop U. S. resources.

Red Army Trapped As U.N. Forces Join

33 air miles apart but slightly more by road. A juncture appeared imminent.

Low-flying planes added to the Red deterioration by taking heavy tolls of fleeinb elements. Pilots estimated they killed more than 1200 Tuesday. The estimated kill Monday was 1400.

Seoul, a city of fire and death, paid the full price for its liberation from almost three months of Communist rule.

General MacArthur announced on behalf of the United Nations Tuesday that "envelopment and seizure" of the Korean capital had been completed.

Savage Fighting Still Rages

Hours later, savage house-to-house combat still raged through its flaming streets.

United States Marines, Seventh Division infantrymen and the South Korean Seventeenth Regiment closed in on some 5000 Korean Reds who preferred death to surrender. The remainder of the garrison was in flight to the north.

Hundreds of North Koreans were slain in the convulsive fighting. About 1800 died in 36 hours of combat in one northwest sector alone.

Noncombatants—the men, women and children who made up Seoul's more than one million population—struggled to keep out of the fighting swirling around them. But there was no safety.

In one room of Seoul city prison the Koreans brought in their civilian wounded. Women crouched on their heels and crooned over a wounded child. An old man sat silently holding the hand of his elderly wife whose lower leg was almost blown off.

Flames Light the Way

Flames from burning structures lit the path for Marines fighting their way toward the American Embassy near Duk Soo Palace in the heart of Seoul.

At one point Marines saw a poster portrait of Stalin and Kim Il Sung, the Communist ruler of North Korea, framed in a blazing doorway.

Marines used 90 millimeter guns of Pershing tanks, 3.5 bazookas and bulldozers to press street barricades.

Seoul was suffering the agonies of Manila, Berlin, Warsaw and the other devastated capitals of World War II. Veteran AP correspondent Don Whitehead reported "not in two wars have I seen anything to equal the battle for Seoul."

Whitehead said the Reds were making their death stand from houses, ridges and rooftops of the 550-year-old city.

Burning Buildings Crash Down

The night sky was aglow with fires. It illuminated weirdly the smoke-filled streets where Marines dashed past buildings crashing to the ground after fires gutted them.

The Reds had chosen to defend Seoul and the Americans were not sparing any building where the Reds had built up strong points. The Allied high command was determined not to sacrifice lives to save the face of Seoul.

Not all of the Communist garrison in Seoul chose to remain. Of an estimated 15,000 to 18,000 defenders when the battle opened five days ago, an untold number fled out of the northeast exits of the city.

More than 2000 left Monday night. Still more followed them after a futile battle early Tuesday when Marines knocked out 11 Red tanks.

A headquarters spokesman said remnants of the Red garrison fled northward toward the 38th parallel where they might make a stand. There was no sign that the fugitive Reds would stop short of that boundary between north and south Korea, some 30 miles north of Seoul.

Meantime allied aircraft dropped more than 2,160,000 leaflets exhorting the Reds to surrender.

Planes Rip Fleeing Groups

The combined might of land based and carrier based aircraft swept Korea on tactical missions, ripping into fleeing groups of the Korean Red army as it retreated on all fronts.

A headquarters spokesman said the Reds no longer were an effective fighting army. Hourly that force was being further reduced although rear-guard units at a few points continued to hold out.

Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker's Eighth Army had become the "hammer" which was pounding the Reds against the "anvil" of Maj. Gen. Edward M. Almond's Tenth Corps on the Inchon-Seoul-Suwon front. This was following to the letter MacArthur's strategy as conceived before the Inchon landing September 15.

In the succeeding 11 days the Eighth Army, bursting out of its old Pusan perimeter in the southeast, ripped and plunged in a half dozen directions through Southern Korea's road and rail network.

Its objective was to join with Tenth Corps units south of Suwon. The objective was attained when tanks met at 11:20 Tuesday night on the highway.

The First Cavalry division had set up its sprint to the north with a 20-mile jump into Chongju.

Second Hits West of Naktong

The U. S. Second Division, striking west of the Naktong River, drove within six miles of Kochang, former Red staging center, after gaining 12 miles.

In the south the rampaging Twenty-fifth Division — with orders to clean up all of southwest Korea—broke up enemy remnants in the Sachon area. The Reds fled in confusion, abandoning their arms.

Officers predicted that tanks and motorized infantry of the division would reach the Korean west coast at Kunsan within 48 hours.

In the northeast sector, South Koreans drove north of Andong, 50 miles north of Taegu, and seized Yongdok on the east coast, 23 miles north of the port of Pohang.

German Reds Defy British Ouster Order

DUESSELDORF, Germany, Sept. 26 (AP).—West German Communists tonight defied the British to oust them from their new five-story headquarters. The British today requisitioned the $480,000 completed a month ago, and gave the Communists 48 hours to move out.

The Communist central committee declared tonight, "we will never voluntarily obey this scandalous arbitrary measure." The Communists said the requisition was a "direct preparation for a third world war."

Willys Hike Prices

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 26 (U.P.)—Willys-Overland Motors Corp., makers of the Jeep and its more luxurious sister, the Jeepster, tonight advanaced its list prices by 2 to 8 percent, becoming the third auto maker within three weeks to change price tags.

Packard and Kaiser-Frazer also have boosted their list prices in a pattern expected to be followed by other auto makers.

Russian Truculence Revived

Gross, the American deputy representative here, wrote to Secretary General Trygve Lie that an Air Force plane in U. N. service "may have inadvertently violated Chinese territory and dropped bombs in the vicinity of Antung on the night of September 22."

This was the second such violation, although, Gross wrote, U. N. aircraft in Korea are under strict instructions not to cross the Korean border into neighboring territory.

Gross said the United States Government "deeply regrets any violation of Chinese territory and any damage which may have occurred." And he repeated that the United States would be willing to pay compensation for damages if an impartial, on-the-spot investigation proved that American planes had been responsible.

On the subject of American bombing, Malik had a field day with a speech that Gross described as "a warmed-over dish of propaganda hash." The Soviet delegate charged that American planes were killing peaceful Korean peasants and fishermen and were hitting hospitals and buses crowded with passengers.

Calls for Discussion

He called for immediate discussion of a resolution calling on the United States to "cease and forbid the bombardment and machine-gunning of peaceful populations."

There was no debate on this proposal, and Malik's speech on it was out of order, for the Council was discussing procedure at the time. In any event, he failed to get it on the Council's provisional agenda; the Council voted solidly against him.

Malik also failed to get the Council to act today on the alleged American aggression against Formosa. This Soviet item had been put on the provisional agenda, but T. F. Tsiang, the Nationalist Chinese delegate, moved to drop it.

Finally, at 8 o'clock tonight, after a five-hour session, the Council voted to quit before reaching a decision on it. This means that Tsiang's proposal will have the floor when the Council next meets, and Malik will have to wait for another opportunity to champion the Chinese Communist cause.

The Soviet and satellite delegates fared no better in the Assembly, although they did revive many of their favorite complaints against the United States. They were voted down repeatedly, by huge majorities, when they tried to prevent Greece, Spain, human rights and other issues from being put on the Assembly agenda.

On Greece, for example, Soviet Ambassador Alexander S. Panyushkin said any attempt to discuss threats to Greece was merely an attempt by "the Anglo-American bloc" to hide "the unceasing terroristic activities carried out in Greece by its ruling circles against the Greek people." Similarly the Soviet bloc fought against letting the Assembly discuss violations of human rights in Bulgaria, Rumania and Hungary.

The debate on the agenda was of no great importance in itself, but the tone of the Soviet and satellite speeches showed clearly that the sweetness and light of the first few days was illusory. In spite of its quiet opening, this Assembly looks as if it will produce many of the same old fights as in past years.

Accountants Dine Tonight

James F. Willett, assistant vice president of the American Security and Trust Company, will be the speaker at a dinner meeting of the D. C. Institute of Certified Public Accountants at 6:30 tonight at the Mayflower Hotel. The subject will be "What a Banker Looks for in a Financial Statement of a Small Business Man."

Chinese Reds Warn U. S. Airmen Are Ready to Fight

TOKYO, Wednesday, Sept. 27 (U.P.).—The Communist Peiping radio broadcast a warning to the United States today that the Chinese air force is ready to attack American planes whenever it gets orders to do so.

"The young Chinese air force is not one to be insulted and the moment we have our orders, we are determined to teach any invading American plane a lesson," the broadcast, monitored here, said.

The warning came in the form of speeches by various delegates to the "national conference of combat heroes." They protested the alleged American bombing of the Manchurian frontier city of Antung, September 22.

"We have the means and determination to defend not only our country but, in conjunction with the Soviet Union, other people's democracies of Asia and the world," one speaker was quoted.

Marine Tank Men Get Groggy Firing Guns in Close Combat

five tanks toward his position. North Korean infantrymen, moving up with the tanks, advanced close enough to fire their burp guns at the Marines.

"By 3:15 or 3:30 a.m. we had everything pretty well stopped, but when we ceased firing they would open up," he said. "We stopped their tanks, but we could not stop their guns. At dawn today one of them still was firing."

Red fire continued throughout the day—mortars, high velocity weapons, rifles, automatic weapons. This correspondent entered Seoul city prison, which marines secured yesterday. Two mortar shells fell within the prison compound, fragments from one rattling off the roof of a prison building and onto the writer's cap.

The marines found the prison empty except for one dead Korean, his hands bound behind him and a bullet through the back of his head.

Prison a Resting Place

Many of the fume-groggy tankmen had to be relieved after firing until the interiors of their tanks became untenable. The prison was a brief resting place for some of them. Other Leathernecks took a breather there too.

Some lay sprawled in sleep within the cells of the huge building. Others rooted aimlessly through North Korean military clothing found in a warehouse.

The Marine chaplain had set up a small and simple altar in the prison chapel. Two candles flanked a crucifix, in front of which lay an opened Bible. On the walls were North Korean newspaper pictures and posters of fat North Korean Red Premier Kim Il Sung.

In one corner the wall bore a colored lithograph of a benevolent-looking Stalin, standing beside a birch tree behind a fair-haired Caucasian boy.

On the main north road into Seoul the street whistled with danger. Sniper bullets hummed like hornets. Their buzz was drowned occasionally by the deeper bark of a Marine M-1 or Browning automatic rifle, or by a Marine artillery or mortar shell.

Cost of Liberation

As the fight for Seoul nears its finish, one of its pitiful aspects grows: The battle dead and wounded among civilians.

This correspondent saw one little girl about 7 who had been burned by white phosphorous. Whether it was ours or the Reds was uncertain. Both sides used it.

The girl was bandaged from head to foot. Only the tips of her fingers extended from the white wrappings. Her eyes were swollen almost shut. Her face was puffed and pitted, as if it had been heavily peppered. She whimpered a thanks for the chocolate bar she was given.

To one room of Seoul city prison the Koreans brought their civilian wounded. There was little Oriental impassivity here. Women crouched on their heels and crooned over an injured child or husband. One old man sat silently holding the hand of his elderly wife, whose left fore leg was almost blown off.

This was the human wreckage of Seoul—the price of liberation.

Dr. Wen Says Red China Will Send 12 Divisions

ATHENS, Greece, Sept. 26 (U.P.). Dr. Wen Yuan-ming, Nationalist Chinese Ambassador to Greece, said today he had learned that Communist China will send 12 divisions of 240,000 men equipped by Russia to fight with North Koreans as volunteers.

North Korean Army Found Evaporating

By Hugh Baillie
President of the United Press

IN KOREA, Sept. 26 (U.P.).—The Communist army around what used to be called the Pusan beachhead is evaporating.

Many are undoubtedly hiding their weapons and changing back to civilian clothes. Their political commissars are said to have all pulled out days ago. And the troops—many of whom were reluctant South Koreans impressed into the Communist army—have begun taking it on the lam.

Ambush a Failure

Of course, this does not mean the war is over. It may never end in a formal surrender. But now the airmen sometimes have to dawdle in the air waiting for targets, so speedily and cleverly are the Communists taking cover.

When they are caught in the open they are slaughtered from the air. In one such episode yesterday, Commies were discovered hidden in camouflaged positions, waiting to ambush passing tanks.

They were soon flushed out with napalm and ran wildly in all directions, into river beds and up the hillsides. Hundreds were killed and the area was left littered with bodies.

A number of Yak planes were captured on the ground at Kimpo. One had its bombs in the racks, and I was told that its engine had been warmed up shortly before the airfield was captured.

Rush efforts were being made to get rice to feed the Koreans with the Americans in that area, doing a lot of heavy work and acting as security guards, as the Communists pretty well cleaned out the food supply before they skedaddled.

Air Control Was Vital

The reasons which produced what appears to be a Communist fiasco are many, of course. One was our capture of the air right at the start.

You can't win unless you control the air, even though the devastating results of sustained bombing sometimes takes weeks to make themselves felt.

The North Korean "plant" has been destroyed. One of the last to go up was their clothing factory, where they were making winter uniforms. And their officer-training center has been erased.

Meanwhile, fresh American troops are arriving in Korea, and very keen and well armed young gentlemen they are.

In traveling from the Seoul area to the Taegu area, where the long arm is reaching out to shake hands with the boys coming down from Seoul, we flew miles behind enemy lines.

We saw numerous villages, many long twisting highways, but absolutely no sign of traffic on the roads, no evidence of human beings in the fields or out in the open anywhere.

From the air it looked like a smiling pleasant countryside of "peace and plenty." But when we passed the vicinity of Chinju there were the familiar plumes of smoke showing where the battle was going on, and soon we saw on the roads beneath us plenty of vehicles. American vehicles, going to the front.

Fritzsche Freed From Labor Camp

MUNICH, Sept. 26 (U.P.).—Hans Fritzsche, Nazi Germany's leading radio commentator and a close collaborator of Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels, was released today from the Eichstaedt labor camp on "good behavior."

Fritzsche was serving a 7-year term imposed in 1947. He had been in custody since the end of the war. His release was announced by the Bavarian Denazification Ministry.

Fritzsche was one of the three defendants acquitted in the Nuernberg international war crimes trial that sent former Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and nine other top Nazis to the gallows.

War I Bullet Fatal

LONDON, Sept. 26 (U.P.).—James Barrow, 56, was killed last week by a bullet fired into his chest in a World War I battle in 1916, Coroner J. A. Gorsky ruled today. The bullet was held responsible for fatal complications following an operation.

2,160,000 Leaflets Tell Korea Of Seoul's Fall; Urge Surrender

TOKYO, Sept. 26 (AP).—A mass leaflet drop by United Nations today announced the capture of Seoul to North and South Koreans.

Planes dropped 2,160,000 leaflets bearing maps showing how capture of the South Korean capital from Red North Koreans cut their supply lines.

The leaflets were dropped on North Korean troops and cities, and on South Korean population centers still controlled by the Reds.

The back of the leaflets carried this message:

"The United Nations and Republic of Korea forces have captured Seoul!

"Inchon and Kimpo airfield have fallen.

"The Communist have been dealt a severe defeat.

"The loss of Seoul cuts the supply routes from the war material factories and arsenals of North Korea to the Communist troops in the south. It shuts off the flow of reinforcements to these forces and severs their path of retreat.

"Further resistance is futile.

"The U. N. forces, representing 53 of 59 member nations of the U. N. have guaranteed humane treatment for all North Korean soldiers who surrender. If the Communist leaders insist on continuing their war of aggression they and they alone will bear full responsibility for the needless death of many innocent people."

Cruiser Is 'Hell Ship' To Retreating Koreans

TOKYO, Sept. 26 (AP).—Reds retreating up Korea's east coast have a name for the United States heavy cruiser Helena. It's the "hell ship" to them.

A message to the Navy from a member of the Korean military advisory group praised the support given South Korean troops by the Helena and her destroyer escorts.

"There were times when we might have been wiped out without the support of the hell ships in your task group. In the last two days we've made a 12-mile advance and captured a lot of Communist troops, including the commander of the Fifth North Korean Division.

"They (the prisoners) gave the Helena the name of the "hell ship" because she pours out so much fire and destruction. They really hate her."

Reds Mix With Women To Escape Air Attack

UNITED STATES FIFTH AIR FORCE HEADQUARTERS, Korea, Sept. 26 (AP).—A spokesman said today pilots' reports indicated Korean Red soldiers are mixing with groups of women and children to save themselves from air attack.

The pilots said there was no evidence of organized resistance between Yongdong, outskirts of which were entered by the United States Twenty-fourth Division and Taejon, 21 miles to the northwest.

Marine League to Send Beer to Korea Fronts

. . . . don't discard last year's suit or coat just because it has developed an unsightly shine or loss of nap. You can have it processed to restore the nap and eliminate the shine for a comparatively small cost. This process does more than just remove the surface shine. It actually renaps the fabric, making it look like new, and the shine cannot possibly return until the nap has worn off again. You'll find this means months of extra service from the garment. It is effective on most types of materials, including silks and rayons. The exceptions are velvet, corduroys and rayons that have been seared or iron-shined. The process will renap flannel, tweed, camel's hair and similar fabrics, we are told, if the material isn't actually threadbare.

It is not supposed to injure garments since no harmful chemicals or acids are used. In fact, you might consider that it improves the fabric, even removing surface scorches and fading. Dry cleaning and pressing is also included in the cost of the new napping process. The process, naturally, is a secret, but it could be magic if our well-seasoned camel's hair coat is any indication!

READ THESE QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ABOUT NU-NAP:

Q. Is NU-NAP a preparation I buy and use myself?
A. No. NU-NAP isn't "something in a bottle." . . . or any kind of chemical. NU-NAP is a patented, exclusive process, available in Washington only at the NU-NAP Process Corp.

Q. What fabrics will NU-NAP help?
A. In men's clothes . . . serges, worsteds, gabardines, smooth weaves that get shiny. Also tweeds, flannels, mohairs, camel's hairs . . . fabrics whose nap wears easily. In women's clothes: worsteds, gabardines, silk, rayon, any fabric that becomes shiny. Also velvets, where the pile is not damaged or heat-burned.

Q. Will NU-NAP hurt or weaken the fabric in the garment?
A. NU-NAP restores the nap which still remains in the garment, even though it seems to have disappeared. NU-NAP does not affect the strength of the weave.

Q. How long does NU-NAP last?
A. As a rule, you can expect a garment with NU-NAP treatment to give you just about the same wear as you have already obtained from it.

Q. Will NU-NAP help moth-eaten condition?
A. In some cases, if moth damage is small and not too deep, NU-NAP can bring up the remaining nap. However, NU-NAP is not a re-weaving process.

Q. Does NU-NAP affect the color of fabrics?
A. By restoring the nap-finish of the fabric, NU-NAP brings back the richness of the original color. Customers are often amazed by this color restoration.

Q. What does NU-NAP Processing cost?
A. For a complete man's or woman's suit, or for outercoats, $7.50—and this includes a quality cleaning and pressing. For items like skirts or jackets alone, NU-NAP costs $3.75, including cleaning and pressing.

Money-Back Guarantee!
If you are not completely satisfied with your garment after NU-NAP treatment, your money will be refunded.

Pyongyang Sleepless In Day-Night Raiding

By Eddy Gilmore

MOSCOW, Sept. 26 (AP).—A Soviet war correspondent in the North Korean capital of Pyongyang reported today the city is being raided night and day by American carrier-based planes and Flying Fortresses.

He said Pyongyang's inhabitants get only about two hours respite from the attackers.

Writing in the Literary Gazette, the correspondent gave this account of a day in Pyongyang:

"It is early morning. The people are unable to get to sleep because air raid alarms hurry them out of bed. They have good reason to hurry. From minute to minute, American jet planes will fly over . . .

"The screams of the sirens are growing like the swell of waves. The roar of jet planes. The crackle of machine guns from the air. The drum of anti-aircraft cannon and machine guns from the ground—all this merges into a deafening roaring, graumbling, crashing.

"People dash for shelters. In their homes, people huddle and cringe against walls farthest from windows.

"Buildings in Korea are light and American pilots fire at walls, roofs, and rake streets up and down.

"Planes usually make two or three runs, then fly away. An oppressive quiet prevails. People who have become used to this creep out of their houses to see if the planes set something on fire. Sirens sound the all clear. Pyongyang's work day begins.

"At 9 or maybe 10 a. m. sirens. Planes again. This time Flying Fortresses. . . . Antiaircraft fire breaks up the formation. . . .

"Like the thunder of waves, explosions beat on the ears of the people in the shelters.

"Now the planes are beyond the city, ready for a new flight.

"Some people come out, stand around the mouths of the shelters. Others just stick their heads out. A thick, acrid smoke settles over the thoroughfares.

"Men hurry with shovels to dig out those buried underneath the ruins. Then the radio tells us to take cover immediately. It is all going to be repeated agian. And it is repeated.

"Roars, planes, explosions, bombs, fire, turnout over the targets, then they fly away.

"People come out and go back to work, to their ruined, wrecked homes.

"Two, three hours go by. Again sirens. This time Truman's air force is represented by a broad assortment. Flying Fortresses, light two-motored bombers, fighter bombers, fighters. This bombing lasts 40 minutes. Some planes bomb residential sections. Others divebomb a pedestrian bridge which joins two sides of the city divided by a river, and so on."

Succeeds Dyer

Dr. Sebrell Heads Health Institutes

Appointment of Dr. William H. Sebrell, nutrition expert, as director of the National Institutes of Health, in Bethesda, Md., was announced yesterday.

Dr. Sebrell

He will succeed Dr. Rolla E. Dyer, whose retirement on age becomes effective October 1.

The National Institute of Health is the medical arm of U. S. Public Health Service. It comprises a number of research institutes devoted to biology and disease studies, principally in heart ills, cancer, mental health and dental ailments.

Sebrell, 45, was promoted to the post by Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, USPHS surgeon general. Since 1948, he headed the service's Institute of Experimental Biology and Medicine, and previously was chief of its Laboratory of Physiology.

The new director is a native of Portsmouth, Va., and received his medical degree from the University of Virginia. Immediately upon graduation, he entered the commissioned corps of Public Health Service.

He began his research career under the late Dr. Joseph Goldberger, who discovered that pellagra is a dietary deficiency disease. Later, Dr. Sebrell branched out into the general field of nutrition research, winning recognition especially for his work on Vitamin B Complex, the role of diet in cirrhosis of the liver, and on the anemias.

During World War II he served as co-director with M. A. Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture, on the national nutritional program. Other nutrition contributions were for the Army in 1945, on the nutritional status of civilians in occupied Germany; and in connection with a postwar survey of German food needs in 1948.

Dr. Sebrell is married and lives with his second wife, at 7119 Marion st., Bethesda, Md. A daughter is studying to become a nurse at Mary Washington College, Fredericksburg, Va., and a son is attending the St. James' School for Boys, St. James, Md.

Yanks Capture Korean Prison; U. S. Prisoners Weep for Joy

By Gene Symonds

YONGDONG, Korea, Sept. 26 (U.P.).—"We're taking this joint over," a voice said, and two tough sergeants and a private who had been held prisoner by the North Koreans for 25 days began to cry.

"When he said that I knew he was a GI," said Pvt. James E. Martin of San Andrea, Calif. "When those GIs walked into that jail, I cried." Then one of the sergeants spoke:

"I thought I was too old to cry but I dropped a couple of tears myself," said Sergt. Frank R. Freede of Monett, Mo., and Long Beach, Calif.

Martin, Freede and Sergt. Blaine Mackrall of Colome, S. Dak., and Tacoma, Wash., were the first American prisoners of war to be liberated in the Korean fighting.

They were freed by tank men of the Twenty-fourth Division, who came through Yongdong on their way to Taejon about 5 p. m. today. The tank men shot the doors off the jail and gave each of the libearted Americans a big slug of whisky, C-rations and chewing gum.

Freede, Mackrall and Martin said they were well treated by the North Korean army but mistreated by the Red police.

"The police were bastards," Martin said.

They said they were fed only a handful of barley three times a day and had to sit in one position for 16 hours, from the time they got up until they went to bed.

The three men were unaware of the victory of the United Nations invasion forces at Seoul and victory by United States forces in the southeast perimeter.

"We thought the gooks had taken Taegu and gone through," Freede said.

Mackrall and Freede were members of the U. S. Second Division. Freede, who had been wounded by a mortar shell, was the only survivor of a group of eight GIs who were machine-gunned in a ditch by North Koreans. Although wounded in the foot by machine gun fire, he managed to crawl away to a hill top when it became dark. He lay there for nine days until some North Korean medics discovered him.

Story Gives Mrs. Freede First News Since Sept. 1

MONETT, Mo., Sept. 26 (U.P.).—Mrs. Frank R. Freede heard about her husband today, the first word she'd received since early in the month when a Defense Department telegram informed her he was missing in action in Korea.

The word came via a United Press dispatch from Yongdong. Her husband, a sergeant and member of the U. S. Second Division, was one of the first three American prisoners of war to be released by American troops in Korea.

Mrs. Freede said that she was informed her husband was missing as of September 1.

House & Garden had that past master at paint mixing, Martin-Senour, concoct a series of distinguished colors. It is all part of H. & G.'s pleasant philosophy that your home should dress in as good taste as you do . . . that "the way you live is an index to the kind of person you are." Our talented coordinators elaborate the theme, show you how smartly individualized four basic themes can be. They blend H. & G.'s newest Parma with porcelain blue in a room that is itself a blend of bedroom and sitting room. They ally French Moroccan surprisingly with Early American, in three rooms. They correlate wrought iron and plastic in a modern setting. And base three rooms on the three-part harmony of dark, satinwood-finish and lacquered mahoganies in Beacon Hill's new English Regency group. Come, see . . . and remember our know-how is yours in the services of our Studio of Interior Decorating.

Vienna Communists Riot, Halt Railroads

VIENNA, Austria, Sept. 26 (AP). Thousands of Austrian Communists cut Vienna's rail traffic to the West temporarily today and clashed sporadically with police for eight hours in demonstrations over wage and price scales.

Vienna, like Berlin, is a four-power city nearly 100 miles behind the Iron Curtain in the Soviet occupation zone. But it never has had a serious blockade. This is the one place where an Allied Control Commission has continued to meet, though usually fruitlessly.

The Australian Press Agency said Communist demonstrators also stormed through the Linz city hall in the American occupation zone and made speeches from the balcony outside the Mayor's office.

Other unconfirmed reports told of Communist seizure of government offices in several provincial cities.

About 12,000 Communists attempted to march on the Chancellory in Central Vienna, where United States Forces are in charge of keeping order this month. Roving bands clashed with police and molested Americans and Britons repeatedly for eight hours. About 20 Austrian policemen were injured, not seriously.

At 2 p. m. men, women and children squatted on the tracks at Vienna's main railway station. For three hours and 45 minutes no train left or entered Vienna from any direction.

Then at 5:45 p. m. the first train left for the American occupation zone in the West when the demonstrators left the tracks. At 8 p. m. Austrian railway authorities said normal traffic had been resumed in all directions.

So far no protest had been made to the Russians. American officials said they felt a protest would be a waste of time. By a London agreement of 1945, the Western Powers are guaranteed free access to Vienna from their zones. British and American airports here are surrounded by the Soviet zone.

The Communist demonstration began when workers from factories operated by the Russians began converging on the Chancellory. There the Cabinet was debating a wage increase, together with a price raise on many lines of goods. Communist slogans objected to the price increases.

An Austrian official said Soviet soldiers threw up road blocks and prevented the arrival of police reinforcements. The Austrian Press Agency said Communists invaded many other factories and forced non-Communists to walk out.

Rioting Reds Meekly 'Keep off the Grass'

VIENNA, Sept. 26 (AP).—Traditionally, Viennese automatically obey the injunction: "Keep off the grass." Nobody in Vienna walks on the grass in a public park, and this was a big help to police today in battling Communist rioters.

At one point, a number of Communists climbed an iron fence surrounding the Volksgarten (People's garden) in an attempt to outflank police. A policeman yelled: "Get off that grass!"

The Communists retreated meekly.

'Peace' Policy

Tito Reported Easing Curbs On Churches

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia, Sept. 26 (U.P.).—Marshal Tito's Communist government has granted important concessions to the Roman Catholic, Serb Orthodox and Protestant churches in Yugoslavia as part of a new religious "peace" policy, church sources said today.

Churchmen of all denominations said a much more relaxed attitude on the part of the state had led to these recent developments:

1. Four Lutheran churches have been returned by the government and allowed to reopen.

2. The Yugloslav army has returned to the Serb Orthodox church the oldest theological seminary in Serbia and the patriarchal palace. Both are in Sremski Karlovci, seat of the Orthodox patriarch, and had served as barracks.

3. The first consecration of a Roman Catholic bishop since the war took place this summer in the northern Adriatic diocese of Pazin and more consecrations are scheduled.

Indicative of the new situation, Marshal Tito called today on Serb Orthodox Patriarch Vikentije. The Bishops of Rasa and Branicheve also were present, and important government officials accompanied Tito.

Lutheran churches in Cleje, Maribor and Ljubljana, in the republic of Slovenia, and in Sarajevo, capital of Bosnia-Herzegovina are open for the first time since the Communists came to power.

The government's action preceded an unpublicized visit here last month by a three-bishop Lutheran delegation from the United States, including Paul C. Empie, executive director of the National Lutheran Churches of America.

The only Lutheran church previously open in Yugoslavia was in the Croatian capital of Zagreb.

Primary school pupils no longer are prevented, directly or indirectly, from taking religious instructions.

be a chief of staff for training and organizing this unit.

No names were mentioned in the communique, but Dwight D. Eisenhower, president of Columbia University, has been mentioned widely in unofficial speculation as the probable choice for supreme commander.

4. The standing group of the military committee of the North Atlantic treaty organization will be responsible for the strategic direction of the integrated force.

The Council announced that final arrangements for this combined force must await the recommendations of its defense committee, made up of the Defense Ministers of the 12 North Atlantic countries, on the following points:

1. Working out the organization of the combined force and recommending steps necessary to bring it into being at the earliest possible time.

2. Consider steps to insure necessary close relationships between the member governments contributing to the force. Only 11 members of the 12-nation Council are expected actually to chip in troops since Iceland has no army.

3. Measures to bring into play all available manpower and production forces for defense. The North Atlantic Treaty organization will consider the precise character and composition of forces to be allocated.

The Council announced that it had discussed the question of using German manpower.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson at an earlier meeting of the Council proposed that German military units be formed. Foreign Minister Robert Schuman of France opposed the rearming of German military units and suggested, instead, that the Germans be permitted to contribute in labor and production and other ways short of rearming.

Responsible sources in the Council have said privately that German manpower will have to be used if an effective force is created, but that this is not the time to make plans for using such units.

The Council's decision indicated that Germany's role in the new setup will be in the nature of increased production.

3 Killed, 2 Felled In Freakish Series Of Rescue Efforts

AKRON, Ohio, Sept. 26 (U.P.).—Carbon monoxide killed three workmen and seriously injured two others in a freakish series of rescue attempts at the General Tire & Rubber Co. plant here today.

W. J. Smith, Thomas McCutchion and Albert Kepler were killed. In serious condition were William Lane and Joseph Mariola.

Company officials said Smith and McCutchion walked into a carbon-black tank and were overcome by gas. Kepler called for help, then went in himself.

Lane and Mariola responded and tried to bring out the three men, all unconscious. Lane collapsed and had to be dragged out, but Mariola, wearing a gas mask nearly succeeded in saving all four men before he, too, fell down unconscious.

Other employes pulled out all five men.

Eichelberger Takes Turn for the Worse

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Sept. 26 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger's condition has taken a turn for the worse, his physician said tonight.

The 64-year-old former commander of the U. S. Eighth Army has developed a pulmonary complication, he said.

Eichelberger underwent a major operation in a hospital here September 14.

Lack of Hindsight

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., Sept. 26 (U.P.).—When his 2-year-old son vanished last night, William Childs drove for three hours looking for him. As he drove into his driveway, a bump awoke his son, who had been asleep on the floor in the rear of the car.

International Court Hears First Right-of-Asylum Case

THE HAGUE, Sept. 26 (AP).—A rebel leader who took refuge in an embassy 18 months ago brought two countries of the New World before the International Court of Justice for the first time in history today for a ruling on the Right of Asylum

Colombia and Peru are contesting the status of Raul Haya de la Toree, Peruvian revolutionary, who took refuge in the Colombian Embassy in Lima in January, 1949.

Colombia demands a safe conduct for him out of Peru, but Peru contests the Right of Asylum on the ground that he is a common criminal rather than a political fugitive.

Jesu Maria Yepes, Colombia's agent, told the court today it's decision would have "a decisive influence on the future of American International Law, and, above all, on the Right of Asylum."

Yepes said that in the event the court did not recognize the Right of Asylum, "this right—one of the essential prerogatives of mankind, as stated in the American Declaration of the Rights and Duties of Men, and adopted by the Ninth Pan-American Conference—would cease to exist."

But "whatever the outcome of your deliberations—the court's judgment will be respected in its entirety by the Republic of Colombia," Yepes said.

The Peruvians are expected to take the floor near the end of the week.

Russians Yield To Britons in Barrier Battle

BERLIN, Sept. 26 (AP).—The British won the bloodless week-long Battle of the Barrier today.

Maj. Gen. G. K. Bourne, British commandant, said the Russians finally agreed to recognize as British territory a 175-yard-wide border strip on Berlin's western outskirts that the Russians occupied last week to gain use of a remote thoroughfare.

The British today pulled down the barrier the Russians had erected and the Russians did not object.

The British rushed up 80 to 100 infantrymen when the Russians overstepped last week. In turn, the Russians posted tommygunners and a squad of German police. These forces faced each other until the dispute was negotiated.

Meanwhile, the Communist press said 900 small shops—laundries, retail stores, cabinet-making shops and construction firms—had been seized by the Communist city government in the past 24 hours. The confiscation was called a new broadside against private enterprise by the West Berlin press.

People's Police accompanied employes of nationalized industries, who had been chosen as trustees of the seized shops, to the premises. The owners were charged with violating currency laws and smuggling goods into West Berlin. They were deprived of their licenses to do business.

Thousands of West Berliners trade in East Berlin, where their West mark is worth five East marks. The West mark is illegal in East Berlin.

Berndt Weinberger, chief of reparations in the East German Communist government, disclosed a "serious danger" that East Germany may not fill its yearly quota of reparations to the Soviet Union by December 1.

The 1950 reparations plan can be fulfilled, he warned in the newspaper Neues Deutschland, "only if the responsible leaders are filled with the conviction that reparations orders are the most important." The total of reparations for the year has not been disclosed.

Germans Swarm to Get Jobs On New Federal Police Force

FRANKFURT, Germany, Sept. 26 (U.P.).—Applicants for jobs in West Germany's new federal police force are swamping police headquarters all over the country, a United Press survey showed today.

The force of 30,000 men, granted to West Germany after the New York conference of the Big Three Foreign Ministers last week, could almost be formed from applications filed directly to the Bonn Ministry of Interior and Chancellor Konrad Adenauer's office, Adenauer said.

State police headquarters all over the country could raise another force of 50,000, the survey showed.

The only exception was Stuttgart, in southwest Germany, recording 270 applicants, mostly former noncommissioned officers in the German army.

Property Controls Ended

FRANKFURT, Germany, Sept. 26 (AP).—The Allied High Commission has ordered the end of Allied property control over nine West German coal companies in which nationals of the United Nations are heavy investors, it was announced today.

The firms, which will remain under the "general supervision" of the Allied combined coal control group, are:

Carl Alexander Steinkholenbergwerk, Baesweiler; Carolus Magnus Steinkohlenbergwerk, Palenberg; Eschweiler Bergwerksverein, Kohlscheid; Sophie Jacoba Steinkohlenbergwerk, Hueckelhoven; Btaunkohlenbergwerk Liblar, Liblar; Steinkhclenbergwerk Heinrich Robert, Horringen; Steinkohlenbergwerk Friedrich Heinrich, Kamp Lintfort; Bergwerksgesellschaft Dahlbusch, Gelsenkirchen, and Gewerkschaft Xanten, Wuppertal-Oberbarmen.

80 Men Die In Blaze in British Mine

CRESWELL, England, Sept. 26 (AP).—Eighty coal miners died in a fire deep underground at Creswell Colliery today and the bodies of many were sealed in the shaft where they fell.

A flash fire generated poisonous fumes that blocked rescue and asphyxiated the trapped miners.

A number of others, caught nearer the surface, crawled to safety. Gasping and stumbling, the stronger ones grabbed those who faltered and dragged them along.

"It was a race against time," said one of the survivors. "We struggled along the road which never seemed to end."

Rescue workers penetrating a section only partially sealed off recovered and brought to the surface bodies of 30 of the victims.

Mine officials announced 22 other bodies had been located and would be brought to the surface if possible.

Rescue Impossible

Mine union officials, government nine inspectors and officials of the national coal board which operates Britain's mines, went underground to survey the situation. This was their verdict:

"Any attempt to recover the bodies was bound to fail and such attempts would inevitably involve further loss of life."

They decided unanimously "to seal off the affected part of the pit."

A low moan from the crowd greeted the posting of this decision at the pit head. Several women fainted. Others were led away, sobbing.

Thus, Criswell mine, known as one of the safest in Britain, became the scene of the country's worst mining disaster since 1947 when 104 died in the under sea workings of the Whitehaven Pit on the Northwest Coast.

1000 Feet Underground

The night shift was working 1000 feet under the Derbyshire countryside when a flash of fire jumped along the black alleyways. Feeding on the rubber belts of a newly-installed section of the mine's 15-mile conveyor system, the fire knocked out the ventilating system and exhausted the oxygen.

Rescue teams probed the exit pasages. But their flashlights failed to penetrate the mirk at many places and their breathing apparatus functioned poorly. They had to turn back a mile from the trapped miners.

Fireman Overcome In Arlington Blaze

A fire that apparently started in a defective oil burner burned out the basement of a home at 4716 Old Dominion dr., Arlington, yesterday. One fireman was treated for smoke inhalation.

W. F. McLindon, owner of the house, said his burner had been leaking oil before the blaze began. Flames were brought under control within 20 minutes. Fireman William Beall of the Cherrydale Company was treated on the scene and returned to duty.

Brassiere Money Theft Case Arrives at a Legal Dead End

MIAMI, Fla., Sept. 26 (AP).—The case of the "brassiere brigade" and the missing quarters reached a legal dead end today.

Twelve persons, who, authorities say, admitted they took part in a long-term swindle of Southern Bell Telephone Co. funds, were freed after a hearing because no one could establish a crime.

Police have estimated more than $100,000 has been stolen from the telephone company's coin counting room over a period of years by girl employes who smuggled rolls of quarters in their brassiers.

Assistant Dade County Solicitor Micheal F. Zarowny said eight women and four men yesterday verbally admitted taking part in a swindle which often amounted to as much as $150 a day for each of four girls working in the telephone counting room. But when the statements were put in writing, all refused to sign.

The Police Department said it couldn't prosecute on a verbal admission alone, and until someone signs an affidavit charging a crime, they too are stymied.

Circuit Judge George E. Holt impounded between $8000 and $10,000 in coins, currency and negotiable bonds rounded up yesterday by more than a dozen law officers.

Zarowny said the girls verbally admitted yesterday the money had been taken from the counting room of the telephone company, but now claimed it was their own.

James Rainwater, attorney for the 12 persons, said he would sue for the return of the money "to my clients."

J. M. Phillips, Miami manager of the company, issued this statement:

"The telephone company intends to prosecute to the fullest extent of the law those persons involved directly on indirectly in the theft of company pay station receipts.

"An investigation of the whole matter is being pressed vigorously and while the amount of money involved seems to have been greatly exaggerated, the case will be prosecuted to the limit to see that justice is done."

Different Method Used by C. & P. Here

Those bras bandits of Miami, Fla., couldn't get away with it here.

That's what the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co. said yesterday. They aren't a bit worried about workers slipping out rolls of change in their unmentionables.

In Washington, the money comes in in sealed boxes, an official explained. It goes directly into counting machines, and from there is placed in large bags.

Drury Bas
... "Gangland" shooting victims

while Robinson was trying to contact him to assure him he would be afforded protection.

Robinson said Drury telephoned him in alarm last week, saying he learned the Miami Daily News had announced he would reveal "interesting things" to the Senate committee. Drury asked for a bodyguard.

Police and State's attorney's investigators are working together to solve the killings. A heavy police guard was assigned to protect former police Capt. Thomas E. Connelly, Drury's former partner.

Drury and Connelly were kicked off the police force in 1947 after they refused to tell a Cook County grand jury how they dug up evidence in the 1946 gangland slaying of James Ragen, wealthy racing news service publisher. They were accused of conspiracy to bring about the false indictment of three men as the slayers.

They blamed their plight on William Tuohy, who then was State's attorney. They said Tuohy "bulldozed" them because they once arrested Jack Guzik, reputed head of the old Capone crime syndicate's gambling operation and was trying to "railroad" them out of service. Tuohy now is a judge.

They lost a court fight for reinstatement and Drury finally became a private detective.

The former police lieutenant supplied Editor Jack Lait of the New York Daily Mirror and Lee Mortimer, Mirror columnist, with information for their book, "Chicago, Confidential."

The Chicago Tribune said Lester Velie received information from Drury for a current article in Collier's magazine on Chicago underworld figures and politicians.

Andrew Aitken, chief of detectives, ordered all known hoodlums picked up for questioning in the Drury slaying.

Police Capt. Patrick O'Connell said Drury's killers may have been imported. "This killing may have taken place here to take the heat off elsewhere—Miami, Kansas City, Cleveland, or Washington," he said. Another police official echoed this view saying:

"I think this job must have come from a long way off. I can't see these mob smarties opening up like this at a time when the Kefauver committee is ready to jump into Chicago. It's like throwing gasoline into a fire."

In Washington, Chairman Kefauver (D., Tenn.) of the Senate crime committee refused to confirm the October 5 date for the Chicago hearings, saying only that they will start "fairly soon."

Kefauver said they have been scheduled for some time and no change has been made because of the Chicago slayings. The date probably will be announced, he said, after Kansas City hearings which the committee will open Thursday morning.

He said he had corresponded with Drury about Drury's possible employment by the committee, but that nothing came of this.

He said Robinson advised him today that Drury had not yet given the committee any information.

Bas, who was active in Babb's campaign for sheriff, was slain on a northwest side street when he attempted to flee from two young men. Bas fell when one bullet hit him and the slayer stepped over him and fired again.

Both Drury and Bas had currency in their pockets, discounting any robbery motive.

General Eichelberger Made 33d Degree Mason

Lieut. Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, retired commander of Allied occupation forces in Japan, was designated a thirty-third degree Mason yesterday by the Supreme Council, Thirty-third Degree, Northern Jurisdiction of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Freemasonry, meeting in Philadelphia.

Final election to the degree will take place next year.

Police Juvenile Bureau to Expand Monday

The Juvenile Bureau of the Police Department will step up its pace October 1 when its staff is increased from 12 men to 30 and its operation put on a 24-hour basis.

Lieut. John Ryan will continue to head the bureau, although it will be under jurisdiction of the Detective Bureau, instead of administrative headquarters.

Lieutenant Ryan said yesterday he had been swamped with applications from men in the department. Assistants to Ryan are Precinct Detectives James G. Bryant, now with the sex squad, and William C. Rasmussen, who has been in the juvenile bureau.

To Provide More Care

The expansion, announced recently by Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, is planned to provide more care and detail in the handling of juvenile offenders.

Classes started Monday night for the men who will take over their duties next Sunday. During the week they will hear talks by Judge Edith Cockrill of the Juvenile Court and Assistant Corporation Counsel Una Rita Morris.

Starting October 1 at 8 a. m., the bureau will have 25 investigators with the rank of private. No matter what time a juvenile is arrested or for what reason, members of the Juvenile Bureau will handle the case.

More Juvenile Cases Foreseen

There will be a juvenile squad car on the street 24 hours a day. Two station clerks will alternate in working the late shifts to keep the bureau open.

Major Barrett predicted the expanded bureau not only will increase police efficiency but also will produce more juvenile cases. He pointed out that, in the past, precinct policemen sometimes overlook minor delinquencies because of the paper work and time involved in handling a complete case.

Under the new system, Major Barrett hopes that those who commit minor delinquencies will not be overlooked and thus will be prevented from becoming real criminals.

Yugoslav Boldness

Doubtless the change in the tide in Korea accounts for the bolder tone adopted by Tito's Yugoslavia. At the United Nations Assembly Foreign Minister Kardelj, whose country abstained from voting for U. N. action against the aggressor in Korea, excoriated the Soviet by name. Most of the indictment had to do with the beleaguerment of Yugoslavia. Soviet satellites, said the Foreign Minister, had broken 47 treaties concluded with Yugoslavia, and up till two months ago 138 Yugoslav representatives had been expelled by those satellites. No fewer than 896 frontier incidents had already occurred this year, and violent anti-Yugoslav broadcasts were incessant. It was because of this situation that Yugoslavia appreciated what was going on in Korea. Kardelj refrained from naming names in this connection, but the implication of his remarks was clear enough. He did not charge the North Koreans with aggression, but "those who are inspiring the policy and activities of the North Korean government."

Kardelj spoke about the "special attitude" adopted by Yugoslavia toward the Korean question. This is due to its position as a Communist state. However, the course of the war has advanced far enough to warrant castigation of North Korea as a tool of aggressive Stalinism, or, as Kardelj himself puts it, an instrument in foreign hands. From his plan for a nation-wide vote for a single national Korean legislature, there can be no dissent. Kardelj's outspokenness is further evidence of the need to pinpoint our propaganda against Stalinism.

Crime On The Run

Several widely separated incidents in the news show that organized crime is beginning to feel and fear the effects of the various spotlights being thrown upon it—and also that it will go to great lengths to protect itself. The most immediate instance, of course, is the police scandal in New York which has resulted in the resignation of Police Commissioner William P. O'Brien at the request of Acting Mayor Vincent Impellitteri. The resignation followed disclosures of payoffs to police in Brooklyn by a gambling syndicate. Whether or not police are involved on a city-wide scale, the affair is a demoralizing one which Mayor Impellitteri has sought to correct by appointing as the new police commissioner, Thomas F. Murphy, former Assistant United States Attorney who prosecuted Alger Hiss.

Not all the trouble in New York concerns this sort of corruption, however. At the request of the New York County Grand Jury Association, the District Attorney is investigating charges that New York police have doctored their crime statistics to make them appear less serious than they really are. New York is apparently the victim of the same sort of situation that this newspaper exposed in Washington three years ago, in which police "pocketed" certain crime reports so that they did not appear on the books. While there has been no official conclusion as yet, it is significant that the FBI does not accept New York crime figures for inclusion in its Uniform Crime Reports. Honest crime statistics are, of course, a must in the broader problem of tackling organized crime.

Meanwhile, in Chicago a private investigator who was expected to testify before the Kefauver Crime Committee, has been murdered in gangland style. The slaying is especially regrettable because the man was apparently a good source of information. The very fact that the crime syndicates feel compelled to go to such lengths, however, is evidence of the fear which the Kefauver Committee has generated. Undoubtedly the Senate citation of Harry Russell for contempt for refusal to tell the committee about his connections with gambling in Miami has helped convince the underworld that the committee means business. Even out in Nevada—whose Senator Malone hardly endeared himself to the country by filibustering the anti-slot-machine bill to death—a Las Vegas newspaper has pointed to the necessity of keeping legalized gambling free from the racketeers flushed from the East who are trying to muscle in on it.

The Kefauver Committee still has much work to do; indeed, the dimensions of its job are just beginning to show. Although some necessary legislation may result, it is becoming increasingly apparent that the most valuable contribution the committee can make is one of public education—piquing local consciences and turning the rascals out by exposure. Its influence has already had a healthy effect in putting the underworld on the run.

38th Parallel

The question of what to do when the United Nations forces arrive at the 38th parallel has become acute. Hitherto the President and the Secretary of State have been saying that the question is one for the United Nations to attend to. This means the Security Council, for the prosecution of the war falls within its jurisdiction. However, no action by that body appears to be possible now that the Russians have returned to it.

From the onset of the war this newspaper urged that the Security Council should delegate all requisite authority while the Russians were away. For instance, on July 22 we said:

> At the very least U. N. objectives ought to include unification of Korea, with free U. N.-supervised elections to follow—and these aims, once defined, should be broadcast everywhere. Beyond this, the Security Council ought to have on the books a resolution on Korea's future which Russia could not block if she should decide to return. Finally, the world ought to be assured that the U. N. will have an international police force at its disposal in Korea to enforce its aims after the fighting stops.

Nothing was done up till August 1, when the Russians resumed their seat, and nothing could be done after that. It is not clear what obstacles were interposed. The State Department, which has handled the diplomacy on Korea brilliantly, seems to have been forehanded enough. It is said to have sought to set up a kind of executive committee by way of guiding action at the 38th parallel. But the proposal died stillborn, apparently on a British objection that this would give too much power to the Secretary General. So the problem remains in the hands of the Supreme Commander of the U. N. forces, General MacArthur.

Now General MacArthur would be well within his rights if he kept up his pursuit till the enemy gives in. For the Security Council resolution of June 27 under which he is operating recommends "that the members of the United Nations furnish such assistance to the Republic of Korea as may be necessary to repel the armed attack and to restore international peace and security in the area."

However, it may be that when the U. N. troops get to the 38th line they will find Russian troops, and in that event a new situation would be created calling for United Nations guidance. China appears to have immobilized itself about Korea. To be sure, Koreans in Manchuria have been allowed to volunteer for service in North Korea with the North Korean army, and this may or may not be a hint from Peking to the U. N. to stop at the 38th parallel. However, that would be a hint without meaning for the U. N. if fighting is still going on. As to a Russian entry, nobody can forecast what action will be taken, though the Russians appear anxious to wind up the Korean imbroglio.

But this cannot be counted upon. The U. N. indecision in the matter of peace aims is thus unfortunate. We have as always a great admiration for General MacArthur the soldier, but we don't like the idea of relying upon him when the situation gets into a political zone of decision, and feel that, barring Security Council action, reliance ought to be put on the friendly offices of such member nations as India and Sweden.

Bradley's Balance

General Bradley's comprehensive article in the Reader's Digest and the Combat Forces Journal, reprinted in this newspaper Sunday, is an admirable exercise in putting first things first. The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff leaves no doubt that he considers the defense of western Europe the No. 1 strategic problem—or, as he puts it, western Europe "is still the strategic pivot of the world." Accordingly, his firm remonstrance to members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization is very much to the point.

"The time for talk," he says, "has now gone by. In this very fall of 1950 we must act." That action consists of giving substance to the collective balance of forces, with the accent on "a specially strong contribution of ground-force manpower" from western European nations "to meet the initial attack on their homeland." General Bradley believes explicitly in a division of labor—which means a specially large contribution of strategic bombers from the United States, jet tactical aircraft from Britain, and Navy contingents from the two countries. He calls particularly on the Netherlands and France to increase their manpower contributions, and he is impatient with the "cannon fodder" argument, pointing to the American record of ground force support in World War II and in Korea. His is a plea for more assumption of individual national responsibility—a responsibility apart from the question of whether more American troops are to be stationed in Europe. Some of that responsibility is being met in larger military budgets, but many European nations have not yet done what they can in furnishing manpower.

It is particularly encouraging to have General Bradley focus his attention on Europe as the main defense area. He emphasizes his abhorrence of preventive war and recommends aid only to those peoples who will help themselves in the fight against Stalinism. "We will refuse absolutely to allow local wars to divert us unduly from our central task," he insists. "They must not be allowed to consume so much of our manpower and resources as to destroy our strength and imperil our victory in a world war." He might well have added that the responsibility for developing a police force of sufficient strength to prevent local wars is particularly a task for the United Nations.

General Bradley is best of all a man of balance. Just as he emphasizes the necessity for balanced collective forces in Europe, so he avoids faddism in his picture of the American armed forces. While recognizing the need for a strong strategic bombing force, for example, he notes that experience in Korea has proved the necessity for tactical air groups supporting ground troops. He stresses the importance of the antisubmarine job of the Navy by pointing to the country's vulnerability in respect of strategic imports. And Korea, he says, "has emphasized again that ground troops are essential not only to repel an enemy, but also to break his will, and ultimately conquer him."

Yet General Bradley's thinking is not in the rut of mass-against-mass combat. He has faith in the potential of new weapons shared with our friends, and he gives a lucid explanation of the use of the atom bomb as a defensive tactical weapon. "If it comes to a final showdown in battle," he notes, "our great advantage will be in industrial capacity and in better weapons more intelligently employed." Then, as a final epigram which pushbutton addicts might well study, he adds: "Men without weapons in modern war are hopeless, but weapons without men are nothing." It is still difficult, of course, to translate a general statement into the niceties of who gets what, but the country is fortunate in having as its senior military officer a man who maintains such a broad and rounded view of military policy.

Bail For Commies

A fine appreciation of the American concept of justice infuses the opinion of Justice Jackson permitting the convicted Communist Party leaders to remain at liberty on bail. There is, of course, no absolute right to bail on the part of convicted persons. But it is customary for the courts to allow bail pending an appeal or a review on a writ of certiorari if a substantial question is to be determined by the appellate court. The reason for liberal exercise of this discretion is obvious. If bail should be denied and the conviction should later be upset, the defendant would be punished in spite of the final court's conclusion that he should not be.

The Government had contended that after the conviction of the Communists was sustained by the Circuit Court of Appeals no substantial question was left for review by the Supreme Court. Justice Jackson replied in effect that the Court of Appeals may have given the right answer, but in a case of this sort only the Supreme Court can give the final answer. This seems to us conclusive. As to the Government's contention that the Commies had forfeited their claim to bail by misbehavior after conviction, the Justice noted that their "dangerous activities" consisted solely of making speeches and writing articles, chiefly editorials for the Daily Worker. While these articles were severely critical of American foreign policy and some of them were patently false, Justice Jackson could find nothing illegal in them. Even men convicted of a Communist conspiracy retain the right of free speech and freedom of the press while their guilt is being finally determined.

Justice Jackson conceded that risks are involved in either granting or refusing bail. One of the risks he had in mind was "the disastrous effect on the reputation of American justice if I should now send these men to jail and the full Court later decide that their conviction is invalid." It is clear from the context of the opinion that he did not permit bail to stand because of the propaganda value that the Kremlin might have found in a different decision. But he was properly mindful that any deviation from the narrow path of justice could be used to our disadvantage. "Under no circumstances," he concluded, "must we permit their symbolization of an evil force in the world to be hallowed and glorified by any semblance of martyrdom." The restraint and sound reasoning of this opinion from a judge who is keenly alert to the menace of international communism is in our best judicial tradition.

China Mission

Jonathan Daniels' new book The Man of Independence, out today, is a sprightly record of what went on behind the scenes in Washington while Mr. Daniels was in the White House as presidential assistant first to Mr. Roosevelt and for a while to Mr. Truman. We were struck with this item, on page 317:

> "I was present when Marshall was going to China," he [Admiral Leahy] told me. "He said he was going to tell Chiang that he had to get on with the Communists, or without help from us. He said the same thing when he got back. I thought he was wrong then, both times."

When is the full story of the origin of this mission going to be told—in the interests of truth and the luckless scapegoats in the State Department?

PLACES WITHOUT NUMBER

Now through a myriad heads that turn to slumber
The city, like a vast and dreamy brain,
Remembers far-off places without number
And country roads it will not walk again.
Tired Mario, who peddles tangerines,
Before he dozes in a crowded room
Feels the Sicilian morning on the vines,
The stony coolness of his father's home.
Hermann above his little tailor store
Breathes a Bavarian hop-field soaked in dew;
Nora the servant sees forevermore
The rock-bound Irish village where she grew
And smells the baking of its hoops of bread
Through years and miles, while truck-wheels shake her bed.

Eastern Revolution

It would seem that the best way to secure friends in the Far East is to work with the anti-feudal social, political and economic revolution taking place there, and at the same time to prevent its taking a Communist direction.

The revolution appears to indorse certain non-Communist principles: the emancipation of women from feudal bondage; the redistribution of land, elimination of unduly burdensome taxes and reduction of usurious interest rates; more democracy and more consideration for the common soldier in the armed forces; more popular participation in political decisions, and liberation from colonialism or any other form of domination by foreign powers. The Eastern government which indorses and promotes these principles is likely to acquire and retain popular support.

According to Marxian theory a country must go through a bourgeois revolution against feudalism before it achieves communism. The program of the West might therefore well be to support the bourgeois revolution which in the long run is likely to be anti-Communist. That revolution includes the idea of political nationalism which will be directed against interference by foreign democracies as well as against interference by foreign Communist dictatorships.

Western policy might then seek to give aid of various kinds to local Eastern anti-Communist governments to the degree they espouse the principles of the anti-feudal bourgeois reform movement. To support unreformed unpopular governments will in the long run lose friends in the Far East.

The English, French, Nazi and Bolshevik revolutions all turned at one stage in a dictatorial direction, because of the fear that foreign interference was seeking to destroy progressive revolutionary gains already made. Fear of outside interference encouraged the centralization of power. In the light of historical experience, therefore, it does not seem desirable to seek to turn back the bourgeois revolutionary forces in Asia.

Meanwhile, it is possible for us to present to the world an ideological alternative to communism, as a goal toward which all can strive freely. Such an alternative would include the idea of political federalism; wide distribution of private production property, and the limitation of government powers—over the individual—to those which are proved necessary to conserve and promote his needs for both liberty and security.

Interracial School

It seems obvious to me that the controversy about segregation in District schools can be resolved by a very simple scheme to the at least partial satisfaction of all parties. It should be possible to set up an interracial school, to which those parents who prefer it, may send their children to be educated without prejudice. The size of the school would be determined by an advance registration, and, it could be alloted an entire building, or a number of classrooms in one of the segregated schools.

From the standpoint of the amount of equipment needed; and the number of teachers per class, it would probably be desirable to begin the school as an elementary school. This would also serve to cut down any friction among the children, who would, at that age, have had very little exposure to race prejudice.

In the interest of making the school truly interracial, the enrollment should probably be limited to a representative proportion of the various races in the District population. Those parents who object to sending their children to segregated schools would certainly welcome such an opportunity, and the school authorities would find themselves much less subject to attack.

Hopkins' Articles

Since many Washington Post readers have written to express their appreciation of the work of various staff writers, I feel it is time that someone mentioned Orval Hopkins. Hopkins, who suddenly turns up on the drama page and probably on many another anonymously, has a fine light touch which is the goal, not frequently reached, of many a feature writer.

Specifically, his Sunday pieces, "Whistle Stopping," turn what in contemporary publications is a listless rehash of press releases into something entertaining and worth reading. Even those of us who never get away for any traveling can enjoy Mr. Hopkins' peripatetic commentary on travel, his family, his vacation trials at Rehoboth every summer, and whatever else, relative to travel or not, he decides to discuss.

In these atomic days, we need more of the writing of Orval Hopkins, another reason why The Washington Post is good reading.

Baltic Immigrants

I am a Latvian DP. Our circumstances become from day to day worse and our immigration to the United States goes so slowly.

We Gaeltics have a proverb—it pains me and I must cry. It would not be quite right, when I say, that it pains only to me, thousands of Baltics are living here as displaced persons in camps. Only someone has more courage to cry, to write to ask the truth.

My immigration to the United States started in the month of November, 1949, when an American priest visited our camp and brought assurance for me and my family. Full documentation was completed in January, 1950. It is not clear to me why for some persons the calling to the transit camp at Wentorf and immigration to the United States can happen in two months, but for the others 6 to 12 months. Where is the mistake? I am waiting now for seven months, but still living in camp and waiting for the United States.

It seems, and so are thinking many persons, that in processing and resettlement centers there are sitting and working persons, who want directly or indirectly prevent or delay our immigration.

Has America such a small interest about us, who are all employable, anti-Communists and all willing to lend a helping hand to America!

Our all request is to beg that immigration must be quicker, as we all have children, who need food, schools, churches to at last live a human life..

Elections In Korea

It has been the lot of all truly great men to have their detractors. It is only to be expected that Syngman Rhee, great Christian, great scholar, great statesman, should be the target for billingsgate. Ever since he went back to his loved native land, for whose freedom he has poured out his very life for more than a half century and where he is now playing a great role in history, there have been those in America who have been savagely hostile to the democratic regime which freely chose him as the first president of the Republic of Korea.

There is a large group of distinguished citizens in the national Capital who have been something more than "close observers" from a distance of the noble experiment in Korea. These are business men, lawyers, public officials, educators, ministers, whose interest in and whose knowledge of the Korean situation extend over many years and, in numbers of cases, involve frequent visits to the ancient land, now the scene of bloody war against aggressors. After intimate acquaintance with Dr. Rhee and close knowledge of his brave fight and wise leadership, this outstanding group agrees that the sort of statement made in recent letter in The Washington Post is exactly the thing that the Communists, who ferociously hate Dr. Rhee, would gladly indorse.

Of course, to any who have eyes to see, the fact that the Korean election referred to could be held at all in a time of crisis, chaos, and transition, when anxious people expect the millennium over night, an election in which 80 percent of qualified voters took part, is itself a democratic triumph of the first order. It is an absolutely false deduction to so shuffle the figures as to indicate the result repudiated Syngman Rhee.

It might be well to remember that even under normal conditions there are those in important offices in America who received only half the votes cast. And let no one forget that the achievement in Korea has all been in spite of the fact that a high-powered broadcasting station in North Korea has daily blanketed the entire nation, pouring out its vile charges against Dr. Rhee and "imperialistic" America.

What has happened in spite of colossal obstacles, under the administration of Syngman Rhee, is so astounding that John Foster Dulles gave it as his deliberate judgment, when in Korea last June, that the Soviets struck when they did because they could not afford to have so conspicuous a democratic success held up before the eyes of Asia—giving the lie to all their propaganda.

With refugees from North Korea have infiltrated thousands of Communists, with their pockets full of monkey wrenches to hurl into the machinery of democratic processes in Seoul or to join the guerillas. That a large number of these Soviet agents have been arrested is a tribute to the loyal millions who support Dr. Rhee.

The facts are that the present government was elected by true democratic procedure. And the logical thing is simply for the north to claim its birthright, out of which it has been cheated by trained Communist puppets. There will be no question how the north will vote after a democratic fumigation.

No wonder a high ranking officer in the American occupation force in Korea declared "Dr. Rhee is so much the greatest of Korean statesmen that he might be said to be the only one."

The best antidote I can recommend, for any who might be affected by the poison of the recent letter referred to, would be to get at once a copy of a book just off the press. It is an expert's objective, up-to-the-minute analysis of Korea and its world-wide implications. The title is "Why War Came in Korea," by one who, on all counts, knows what he is talking about, Dr. Robert T. Oliver.

Matter Of Fact

The Conquerors

WITH THE MARINES ON THE SEOUL FRONT: As these words are written, the city of Seoul lies spread out beneath the Marine positions on the heights. The battle for the Korean capital has begun with hard fighting against violent resistance.

From Inchon to Seoul's outskirts, this reporter has marched with the Marine company that most often headed the attacking column. The experience, although depleting to anyone in soft condition, has been stirring, almost exhilarating. Now that Easy Company is being sent for a short time into reserve, it may be worth while to try to explain why this experience has had so much of meaning and so much of goodness.

The basic reasons, of course, were the company itself and the men who compose it. This little band of Americans, whose average age is not much above 20, was plunged into the Korean fighting in early August. Few had seen combat before. Hardly one possessed the kind of "understanding of what they were fighting for" that academic-minded people at home are always saying soldiers ought to have. As far as one can make out the company's view of the matter, then at the cruel beginning and now when victory is in sight, they have been fighting for their country. And this simple sentiment, reinforced by stern training and the company's powerful sense of being a team, has been quite good enough.

IN THEIR first combat on the Chinju approaches, this reporter saw the company almost lightheartedly set out on a 10-mile night march after holding a naked mountain peak for 48 hours under continuous shell fire. At No Name Ridge, the company led the assault, and of the 42 men of the forward platoon, only a few reached the crest. And at Yongsan, it was again the company that stormed its way into the little village.

In these and many other fights, in hardly more than six weeks time, this company has lost by wounds or death almost two-thirds of those who were its original members. Yet with these heavy losses, the company has never failed, either to hold a position it was asked to hold, or to take a position it was asked to take. And with all this behind them, the men of the company rushed Inchon's Red Beach and drove their way to Seoul with no seeming thought of what had passed or what might come.

What is so stirring about the company, however, is not that it is a great fighting outfit. Fighting is the company job, and the company does it superlatively well, being as careful to take cover, to dispose itself for mutual support, to dig its foxholes deep after every march, as it is careless of danger and death when carelessness is needful.

What is stirring, rather, is to see how the men of the company, as individuals, have withstood the harsh tests of this fighting. It is only after you have marched with the company a while that the individuals begin to stand out from the team—the humorist, a soldier of the second platoon with a sharp, hard bitten wit; the hunter, a young, red bearded corporal who is always pleading for permission to take his fire party out to stalk the enemy alone; the scrounger, whose pride it is to "steal the infantry blind;" the Don Juan, who ran away from home when he was 12 and, besides fighting, thinks only of new conquests; the family man, whose whole life is a little California cottage where a young wife and two children await him.

AND AFTER you have marched with them awhile you also learn how cheerfully these men depend upon their chiefs—the Polish-descended lieutenant, tall and lanky, who is such a fighter he needs holding back a little; the big, bearded gunnery sergeant, whose rasping chant is heard all day, "keep down, take cover, get off the skyline," yet who always volunteers for the night patrols; the captain with a name from the Ukraine, whose brothers still work in the mill in Connecticut, who got his education and made his way in the Marines by sheer intelligence and guts, who likes to talk about his little boy and the new baby on the way when he is going into battle.

Far from transforming the men of the company into th sareastic or self pitying cardboard cutouts of the war hovelists, their harsh experience seems almost to have enlarged and amplified them. They must, surely, have their share of selfishness, meanness, greediness and calculation. But on the march and in a fight you do not see these qualities.

What little there is of food or shelter is generously shared. Whatever the discomfort or the danger, it is met with salty humor or calm determination. Whatever the problem it is tackled shrewdly and coolly. This is a human atmosphere, indeed, that makes you believe in the essential value, the often hidden yet always present virtue, of your own people

And here, perhaps, is the moral of this experience, which must forcibly strike anyone who knows the very different atmosphere of the snake pit that is Washington. These men of the company, after all, are quite ordinary Americans, who have had a rather less than average share of the conventional good things of our luxurious society. If they are brave and generous hearted, curiously wise and genially indomitable, it is because quite ordinary Americans respond in these ways to the right sort of challenge. And when you observe this, and in the same breath remember the pettiness, cowardice, cheapness and self-seeking of so many of those to whom the destinies of these men are confided, you grow impotently angry at the unworthiness of the leaders of the country that they lead.

most jumped down my throat taking me up."

[The New York Herald Tribune said the criticism was relayed to Byrnes in Spartanburg, S. C., where he is awaiting election as Governor on the Democratic ticket, and it "stirred him to hot language climaxed by the remark: 'Oh, I guess I'll just leave him (the President) to the Marines he insulted.' "—Editor's Note.]

Author Daniels, in telling about the meeting of Mr. Truman and Premier Stalin at Potsdam, says that they seemed men grown straight out of diverse soils. The President, he says, recognized Stalin's type the moment he saw him.

"Stalin," he quotes Mr. Truman as saying, "is as near like Tom Pendergast as any man I know."

Daniels, speaking for himself, notes some similarities between the boss of Russia and the departed political boss of Kansas City. Stalin, like Pendergast, was built close to the ground, he notes, and also had big hands. Stalin, he says, gave Mr. Truman the impression that, as Tom Pendergast always insisted about himself, he meant to stand by his word when he gave it. Daniels says that afterwards this was "increasingly difficult to understand."

'I Like Old Joe'

He quotes the President as saying:

"I got the impression that Stalin would stand by his agreements, and also that he had a Politburo on his hands like the Eightieth Congress.

Mr. Truman's estimate of Stalin, clearly, was not intended to be uncomplimentary, even if Pendergast did go to prison as a grafter. The remark seems to complement the one he made in a 1948 whistle-stop speech at Eugene, Ore.: "I like old Joe. He is a decent fellow, but he is a prisoner of the Politburo. He would make certain agreements, and he would keep those agreements, but they won't let him keep them." Mr. Truman, when he said that, was having his troubles with the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress—the "do-nothing, good-for-nothing Eightieth Congress."

Daniels' book about the sometimes gentle, sometimes combative Missourian kicked up a controversy even before it reached the stands. Lippincott sent to reviewers a correction from the author and suggested that it be made a footnote in the chapter dealing with the Chicago convention of '44.

It was a denial by Cardinal Spellman that he told President Roosevelt in 1940 that "Jimmy" Byrnes would be vulnerable as a Vice Presidential nominee because he was "a renegade Catholic."

Doubtless, a lot of people will be made angry by this book, but it seems unlikely that Mr. Truman will disavow any of the statements attributed to him. Since he wanted Daniels to write it and talked freely to him, it must be taken for granted that galley proofs were sent to the White House so that they might be checked for error.

JONATHAN DANIELS
. . . Biographer of Mr. Truman

Daniels, 48-year-old editor of the Raleigh (N. C.) News and Observer, was a member of the White House secretariat in the latter Roosevelt days, and he kept a diary which he quotes from in his new book. One entry tells how Roosevelt, at a staff meeting on June 27, 1944, mentioned Henry Kaiser, the industrialist, as a possible Vice Presidential nominee. But FDR didn't know whether Kaiser could be trusted politically.

Truman, Byrnes Break

Daniels' diary further quotes Roosevelt as giving this explanation of what happened four years earlier:

"You know how the nomination of Wallace came about before. My first choice was Cordell (Hull) and he sat in my room while I was in bed for three hours and just said he wouldn't be Vice President. My second choice was Jimmy Byrnes but I talked with Archbishop Spellman and others in the church and they said that the feeling against a renegade Catholic would be such that any Catholics in doubt would resolve the difference against us—and so at the last minute it was Wallace . . ."

But at Chicago in 1944, as Daniels relates, Byrnes thought—"or like an Irish actor made others think"—that he had the Roosevelt blessing as a successor to Wallace. Mr. Truman had gone to Chicago to put Byrnes in nomination and continued working for Byrnes even after he himself had been tapped for the No. 2 place by FDR.

What happened in that '44 political drama is described in some detail by Daniels, and it leads him to conclude that, from then on, it was "impossible" for Mr. Truman and Byrnes to get along on a permanent basis. He writes:

"Politically Truman owed Byrnes nothing; as a man who had received what Byrnes thought was to be his, he felt oddly in Byrne's debt. In the complicated psychology of American politics, Byrnes could not escape the feeling that he should be President, not Truman. Unquestionably his opinion was that he was better qualified for the Presidency.

"He was, he felt, doing Truman a favor by taking on his toughest job and, while Truman did not want a Stettinius as Secretary of State, he was, as every President is, acutely aware of the fact that the President alone is chief of American foreign policy. Perhaps not Byrnes but some of his subordinates did not keep that constantly enough in remembrance."

Daniels says that the Truman-Byrnes relationship had begun to fray before 1945 was over, and he quotes the President as saying to Gen. George C. Marshall in the latter part of that year: "If Byrnes quits me, I want you to be Secretary of State."

He says that Mr. Truman dates his break with Byrnes from the Moscow Conference in the winter of 1945-46 at which Byrnes, the President believed, "went too far in accepting Russian positions with regard to the governments of Bulgaria and other satellite states." The author quotes Mr. Truman as saying that "Byrnes lost his nerve in Moscow."

The real break, Daniels says, came aboard the President's yacht, Williamsburg, after Byrnes returned from Moscow.

"Byrnes got the real riot act after Moscow," the book quotes the President as saying. "I told him our policy was not appeasement and not a one-way street."

Wallace's Firing Discussed

Byrnes resigned in January, 1947, giving the state of his health as a reason. He recently won the Democratic nomination for Governor of South Carolina, after laying down an oratorical barrage on Mr. Truman's Fair Deal.

The book reviews the incidents leading up to Henry Wallace's dismissal from the Cabinet in 1946, concedes that the whole thing was badly handled, and gives Mr. Truman's description of the final incident in his own words, as follows:

"I called Wallace in. Charlie Ross was present. We made an agreement as to what he would say to straighten the thing out. In the conversation I remember Wallace saying, 'I think there are times when the end justifies the means.' I said, 'What did you say?' and he repeated it. I knew I could not get along with him. He went out and gave out an interview diametrically opposed to what he had agreed to do. The next day I fired him."

Daniels cites some incidents to show Mr. Truman's high regard for General Marshall, his new Secretary of Defense, and also some to indicate Marshall's distaste for partisan politics where official business is concerned.

In 1948 the President held a meeting of State Department officials and members of the White House staff, the question at issue being recognition of the new Jewish state of Israel. Mr. Truman called on Clark Clifford, then White House counsel, to state the case for recognition, which Clifford did.

Marshall Vetoes Politics

Marshall, then Secretary of State, "flushed," and said:

"Mr. President, this is not a matter to be determined on the basis of politics. Unless politics were involved, Mr. Clifford would not even be at this conference. This is a serious matter of foreign policy determination and the question of politics and political opinion does not enter into it."

Mr. Truman closed the matter, saying "I think we must follow the position General Marshall has advocated."

But Marshall finally came around, and the United States r cognized Israel 16 minutes after it became a state, beating Russia by a full day.

The headline material in "The Man of Independence," although important historically, perhaps, is not necessarily the best reading. Many will find the story of Harry Truman, the mule-trader's son who triumphed over all kinds of odds and heartbreaks to reach the White House, far more entertaining. It is the story of a man who tried farming, banking, building, haberdashery, automobiles and oil, but who "never really seemed to know what he wanted to do until he was nearly 40 years old."

"My whole political career," he told Daniels, "is based upon my war service and my war associates."

The author says that when he first saw Mr. Truman in the White House in 1945 he seemed "almost sacriligiously small," a "tragically inadequate substitute for Franklin D. Roosevelt." Later he changed his mind. He doesn't say, however, that Mr. Truman is a great man. What he does say is that Mr. Truman, taking over after Roosevelt died, taught Americans "that their greatness lies in themselves."

many months on the job. Speaking for the trustees, Ford said "the best thought available in the United States" went into the work, and the resultant unanimous conclusions and recommendations "were influenced by and responsive to the best American judgment of our times."

Here are the five areas of activities where study and action will be supported by the Foundation's funds:

1. Contributions toward world peace and the establishment of a world order of law and justice.

Specific activities include those directed toward relieving tensions leading toward war; development of understanding of the conditions that make peace; strengthening the U. N. and other international agencies; and improving the structure of United States governmental and private groups concerned with world affairs.

2. "Greater allegiance to the basic principles of freedom and democracy."

Included are activities designed to eliminate "restrictions on freedom of thought, inquiry and expression"; to maintain Democratic control over public and private authority; to strengthen political processes; and to strengthen procedures on private rights.

3. Advancement of economic well-being.

Specific activities include those aimed at high production and employment; economic stability; greater economic opportunity for individuals; improvement in business firms and labor unions; better labor-management relations; improvement of living standards throughout the world; and economic education.

4. Expansion and improvement of educational facilities and methods.

Projects include those to promote greater equality of educational opportunity; the reduction of economic and racial barriers to educational opportunity; better use of mass media of information; promising new educational ventures; improvement in the quality and supply of teachers of all kinds.

5. Scientific activity in the field of human conduct.

Specific activities would include "the scientific study of man" and human behavior; the study of man's "beliefs, needs, emotional attitudes and other motivating forces"; the process of learning and of communication; of personal maladjustment and its consequences; and of the effectiveness of present sciences in this field.

The trustees reported that while there was vital need now for adequate military preparedness to protect the free world, there was also the "greater long-range need for unremitting efforts to remove war's basic causes and to build a world-foundation for permanent peace."

This, said the report, "is the greatest singe issue of our times. In this balance is the very survival of man."

From the discussion of the foundation's aims and needs, it appeared that it would support many projects in cooperation with and for the benefit of various bodies within the UN and the United States Government.

Gifford Reported Selected For London Ambassadorship

By Drew Pearson

President Truman has decided to appoint Walter Gifford, former head of the American Telephone & Telegraph Co., as American Ambassador to Great Britain.

Gifford

Gifford was a member of Gov. Thomas Dewey's finance committee in 1948 and was chairman of Herbert Hoover's unemployment Committee during the darkest days of the depression, 1931-32, at which time he was subject to considerable criticism for failure to investigate monopolies to alleviate the breadlines.

Gifford is close to General Marshall, the new Secretary of Defense. It is reported Gifford's appointment was inspired by Marshall.

Word of the Gifford appointment came about when James Bruce, former Ambassador to Argentina who has long been promised the London Embassy, called at the White House this week. Bruce, an active money raiser for Mr. Truman at a time when Truman money was hard to raise, had received a personal commitment from the President some time ago that he would be appointed as Ambassador to Great Britain when Lewis Douglas, present Ambassador, resigned.

When Bruce called at the White House the President broke the news of the Gifford appointment.

He told Bruce a terrible thing had happened, that he had been outmaneuvered and he thought he would have to ask Bruce to relieve him from his commitment.

"You're in charge of foreign policy, Mr. President," replied Bruce. "It's your responsibility and the most important one you have. If you have found a better man for this job, that's enough for me."

Mr. Truman said that wasn't exactly it, and added that "they" had handed him someone he didn't know, who is president of the telephone company.

"You mean William Harrison?" asked Bruce.

The President said that he had forgotten the name.

"Could it be Sosthenes Behn?" said Bruce, referring to the head of International Telephone and Telegraph.

The President replied that it was not Behn.

"Well, is it Walter Gifford?"

Mr. Truman replied that he was the man, and added that the situation had gotten out of his control. He said he regretted that Bruce was having to suffer for his loyalty to the President.

Bruce replied that he had ample to keep him busy, with his own work in New York and Baltimore.

The two men parted good friends.

Calling List

President Truman yesterday had the following White House appointments:

11 a. m.—Council of economic advisors.

12:15 p. m.—Representative Clark W. Thompson (D., Tex.).

12:30—Secretary of Defense Marshall.

corner stones of the civilized world.

"The second is that the situation which confronts our country and the community of free nations, together with the heavy burdens you have to bear, naturally would make me want to serve should you call on me again. But in order to be available I am advised I must have several months rest."

Ambassador Douglas, scion of a wealthy mining and cattle family, was born in Bisbee, Ariz., 56 years ago. He served in the Army in World War I, afterward went to the Arizona Legislature, and in 1927 came here to the House of Representatives.

In 1933 President Roosevelt persuaded Douglas to give up his House seat and become the New Deal's first Budget Director. Douglas resigned the next year. He denounced the Administration's financial policies and called for a balanced budget. A Democrat, he voted for Alf Landon, the Republican nominee for President in 1936, and for Wendell Willkie, the next GOP nominee in 1940.

Douglas became a strong advocate of American aid to Britain in World War II, and this brought about a reconciliation with FDR.

Douglas was named Ambassador to Britain on February 26, 1947. The post was vacant at the time owing to the fact that W. Averill Harriman, who had been Ambassador, was called to Washington to be Secretary of Commerce after the firing of Henry Wallace. O.

writes the Odyssey of the "everyday" American through our times . . .

The Man of Independence

"The man of Independence" is Harry S. Truman. This book is a brilliant, entertaining and often profound study of him as the symbol of that average "everyday man."

Here is the story of the America in which the President grew up, and from which he took its characteristic color and flavor as perhaps no President has since Andrew Jackson. It is a case history of the American and his meaning to the world in our times—a fresh, lively interpretation of our national life and aspirations.

Courts' Budget Rise Of $205,400 Asked

The District Commissioners were asked yesterday to approve a $2,706,900 courts budget for the fiscal yeau ending June 30, 1952.

The biggest item in the $205,400 increase over fiscal 1951 was requested by Municipal Court. The judges of that court ask for a score of additional employes and $95,000 for finishing judges' chambers, courtrooms and for installation of jury boxes.

Among the personnel requests of Municipal Court, are two probation officers, an attorney advisor, a judge's secretary and an assistant warrant clerk. As justification, court officials cite the recent increase of the number of judges from 10 to 13, and increased business.

The total budget asked by Municipal Court for fiscal 1952 is $846,000, compared to the present $668,000.

Juvenile Court once again is asking for a research-statistical department. It is an annual request, turned down by Congress in the past, for a three-man staff to handle court data.

The court officers cite meager statistics now available and say that there can be no present proper check on recidivism (relapses in prior criminal habits), nor are data compiled as to race, age, type offense, or treatment.

A statistical department would guide the court and the community as well and would prove economical in finding the trouble spots in the city's widespread juvenile delinquency problem, officials said.

Also requested in the Juvenile Court 1952 proposed budget of $340,000 is a social work intake supervisor to give added guidance to parents whose children are in trouble, and for better follow-ups. The 1951 budget is $316,500.

The Municipal Court of Appeals asks for $95,500 in comparison with the present $92,000. The increase is primarily to handle mandatory salary adjustments.

The District's 1952 share in paying for the Federal courts here comes to an estimated $1,425,000, the same as in the present fiscal year.

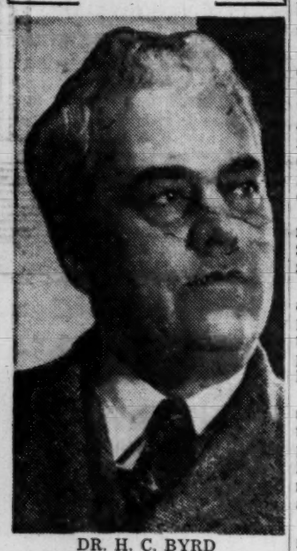
'Curly Byrd' Day Oct. 6 At Crisfield



DR. H. C. BYRD
... To be honored by home town

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, will be honored October 6 by his home town of Crisfield and home county of Somerset on Maryland's Eastern Shore.

The day has been set aside as "Curly Byrd Day." The program will begin in the afternoon with an assembly of all Crisfield elementary and high school students on the athletic field of the Crisfield High School, where Dr. Byrd is scheduled to address the group.

A dinner, limited to 200 guests, will be held at the Masonic Temple from 6:30 to 8 p. m., followed by a reception, open to the public, at 8:30 p. m. at the Armory. At that time, a bronze plaque, with a likeness of Dr. Byrd, will be presented to him.

State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes will serve as master of ceremonies during the various events. General chairman of the celebration is Charles D. Briddell, with Benjamin Sterling and J. Osborne Nelson assisting him on the planning committee.

George F. Carrington, principal of the high school, is in charge of the assembly; Mrs. Tawes and Mrs. Carrington in charge of the dinner; Mayor Egbert L. Quinn in charge of the plaque committee, and Mrs. Bernice Reed and Mrs. Evelyn Andrews in charge of the reception.

District Guard Asks Funds for 10 New Jobs

The District National Guard has asked for a $154,500 budget for the year starting July 1—a $49,500 increase over current appropriations—to create 10 new jobs, including that of a $9297-a-year adjutant general.

The Guard has been without an adjutant general—chief administrative officer—for more than a year, since the Department of the Army started paying the entire salary of the commanding general and stopped paying any for the adjutant general.

District Commissioners cut out a similar request last year.

Other new job requests that would cost a total of about $30,000 include an administrative assistant to the commanding general, four engineers for work at Andrews Air Force Base, a labor foreman at Camp Simms, a carpenter, switchboard operator and stenographer. A $9086 item for new equipment would buy athletic gear and tools for service centers at the Armory and Camp Simms.

Philippines Now Seek War II Guerilla Fund

MANILLA, Sept. 26 (AP).—The Philippines government, seeking to bolster its sagging finances, wants 30 million dollars that the United States Government appropriated but reportedly failed to spend in payments to guerillas who fought the Japanese during World War II.

Reliable sources here said the United States made available 150 million dollars but actually paid out only 120 million to 60,000 "recognized" guerillas. Payment and recognition procedures stopped in 1948.

STEADY CLIMB—Eisenhower's popularity among Republicans as a favorite for 1952 has increased since June, when the Korean war started, and has been rising for more than a year

The Gallup Poll

Eisenhower Popularity Booms Among GOP Voters in Survey

By George Gallup
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 26.—One important political development since the Korean war started in June is an increase in the popularity of Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower as the Republican favorite for presidential nomination in 1952.

In the latest survey among the rank and file of the GOP he is the choice of 42 percent, far ahead of any other candidate, as compared to 39 percent in a similar survey in June.

Eisenhower has been the only man to show a gain in popularity with Republicans during the three-month summer period. Also, his strength has increased not only among the rank and file of the GOP but with independent voters, who rate him 4-1 ahead of his nearest Republican rival.

Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio, who is campaigning vigorously for reelection to the Senate, ranks next to General Eisenhower as the choice of Republicans for 1952. He is followed closely by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey of New York and Harold E. Stassen, president of the University of Pennsylvania.

Each person in the survey was asked whether he classified himself politically as a Democrat, a Republican or an independent. Then he was given a list of men mentioned as possible candidates for the Republican Party and was asked:

"Here is a list of men who have been mentioned as possible presidential candidates in 1952 for the Republican Party. Which one would you like to see nominated as the Republican candidate for President?"

Here is the vote of those classifying themselves as Republicans:

REPUBLICAN VOTERS	Today	Last June
Dwight D. Eisenhower	42%	39%
Robert A. Taft	15	15
Thomas E. Dewey	14	17
Harold E. Stassen	14	14
Earl Warren	6	9
Alfred E. Driscoll	1	1
Others in list	2	1
None of these	1	1
Don't know	5	3
	100%	100%

Others mentioned in the latest survey included Senator Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, Gov. James H. Duff of Pennsylvania and Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr., of Massachusetts.

General Eisenhower has been climbing steadily for over a year as the favorite of Republicans. A survey in July, 1949, found him the choice of 21 percent; in November the figure rose to 25 percent, then to 37 percent by April of this year, 39 percent in June, and finally to 42 percent as reported today.

Among independent voters questioned in the survey Governor Warren and Mr. Stassen rank ahead of both Senator Taft and Governor Dewey. The independent group, comprising about one-fifth of the voting population, wields an important influence in deciding American elections.

Here are the choices of the independents from this same list of Republican leaders:

	Today	Last June
Eisenhower	44%	40%
Stassen	11	14
Warren	11	7
Dewey	10	14
Taft	9	10
Others in list	5	8
None of these	4	1

Army Plans To Reopen 3 Hospitals

Three big military hospitals will be reopened and nine others expanded to take care of Korean casualties and the enlarging Army, it was announced yesterday.

This addition of some 19,000 military hospital beds will become effective by the end of December and be followed by still further expansion each month thereafter, officials said.

When the armed forces reach their peak strength of 3,000,000 men announced by President Truman, the Nation's military hospital capacity will be more than double what it was at the start of the Korean war, it was stated. Each month beginning January 1, it is expected that 2000 to 3000 beds will be added—either by reopening additional closed hospitals or expanding existing ones.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.), of the House Armed Services Committee, who fought the hospital economy cutback program last spring, announced the decision to put back three of those closed then and to expand others.

The Department of Defense later confirmed Vinson's announcement. Dr. Richard L. Meiling, director of medical services, who has been under attack by Congress for the economy plan, said the expansion would increase the number of beds staffed and ready for use in military and naval hospitals from 37,300 on July 1 to 49,408 by October 1.

The number of patients actually hospitalized during the second week of September was 28,500, he said. A reserve capacity of 62,592 additional beds in available in closed hospitals or wards, Meiling added.

Vinson said that 1500 additional doctors must be called by the armed services to staff the increased hospital facilities planned by January 1. Some can be drafted from civil life under a recent law.

Vinson said the Army General Hospital at Valley Forge, Pa., will be reopened immediately. The Murphy General Hospital at Waltham, Mass., will be reopened by November 1 and the Percy Jones General Hospital, Battle Creek, Mich., by December 1.

Camp hospitals to be expanded are:

Camp Carson, Colo., 500 beds immediately and 2000 by December; Camp Bragg, N. C., 500 beds now and 1600 by December; Camp Benning, Ga., 500 now and 1500 by December; Camp Campbell, Ky., 500 now and 2000 by December; Camp Hood, Tex., 850 by November and 1500 by December; Camp Edwards, Mass., 1500 by December; Camp Pickett, Va., 1500 by December; Camp Gordon, Ga., 1000 by December; and Camp Atterbury, Ind., 500 now and 2000 by December.

Relief Sought At 'Worst' School Corner

The Prince Georges County Commissioners were asked yesterday to take steps to alleviate "the worst school traffic bottleneck in the county"—on Defense hwy. in Bladensburg.

Superintendent of Schools G. Gardner Shugart told the commissioners that some 2000 pupils attend the Bladensburg Senior High Schools there, directly across the street from each other.

The commissioners agreed to ask Superintendent of Police Ralph W. Brown whether a county policeman could be assigned there. They offered an alternative suggestion of placing a civilian guard, to be paid by the Board of Education, if a policeman could not be used. Shugart agreed this would be satisfactory.

Because of the heavy traffic on Defense hwy., said Shugart, school buses frequently must wait as long as 10 minutes before being able to break into traffic lines on leaving the two school grounds.

In addition, many of the pupils must walk along the sides of the road in going to and from the schools, he said.

The town of Bladensburg assigns a town officer at the intersection of Edmonston rd., 200 yards distant, in front of the primary school, Shugart pointed out, but officials have said they cannot spare another policeman for the requested assignment.

Also at yesterday's meeting, the commissioners authorized expenditure of $15,600 for purchase of four new school buses.

More Goings Than Comings Noted in New Phone Book

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

There are more Goings than Comings in the new phone book and by the same token it is no longer quicker to say Jack Robinson.

New Book

Because you have to say Jack Robinson seven times to take care of the Chesapeake and Potomac's customers by that name.

The book, delivered yesterday, sports a yellow-banded grey cover. The classified directory has been dressed up with a front-page drawing of the Lincoln Memorial.

The AAA (American Automobile Association) still leads the subscribers, and Boley S. Zywusko is "last but not least." However, Mr. Zywusko has moved since the last book. Gone over book. When the last book came out went into the bindings.

The phone company reports it has 422,728 listings in the new boo. When the last book came out in December, 1949, there were 408,670 subscribers.

The phone company had some statistics on the mammoth job of bringing its phone numbers up to date:

It took 2,460,000 pounds o' white paper for the subscribers' book and 1,850,000 pounds for the classified section. Some 33,500 pounds of ink went into the alphabetic book and 25,000 pounds into the classified.

Forty-six miles of cheesecloth went into the two books.

The phone company hopes to complete delivery of the new books by early October and they don't want your old ones back.

Persons accustomed to hiding folding money in the phone books are reminded to remove the cash before disposing of the old books.

Italian Cabinet Backs 'Civil Defense' Corps

ROME, Sept. 26 (U.P.)—The Cabinet today approved a government proposal to form a "civil defense" corps for use in war or emergency and to help guard against any uprising by a Communist "fifth column."

Parliamentary sources said 40,000 men will be enrolled at once. Communist critics charged the corps would be a revival of the Fascist secret police. It must still be approved by Parliament. Parliamentary sources said the proposed corps "might eventually run to as many as 200,000 men."

Most Beloved Car in the World!

Ask the average owner of a 1950 Cadillac whether he expects his next car to carry the same proud name—and the chances are he will find it difficult to believe that you are serious.

It simply never occurs to him that any other car could take the place of his beloved Cadillac.

And this deep respect for Cadillac goes far beyond its owners. In fact, it overflows the whole of America.

A survey just completed indicates that almost half of all the motor car owners in the United States would buy a Cadillac if they felt their choice completely unrestricted.

Surely, in all our industrial history, there has been no finer example of quality's ability to hold the respect and regard of the American people.

We wish that all who want a Cadillac could own one. There can be no question that ownership of this wonderful car adds much to the joy of living, and makes each hour you drive a pleasanter experience.

And we know that more would purchase Cadillacs if only they would properly evaluate these basic facts:

—the lower-priced cars in the Cadillac line cost less to buy than certain models of numerous other makes of cars.

—you can drive a Cadillac all day long, under normal conditions, on a single tankful of gasoline.

—a Cadillac car is designed so well, and is so soundly built, that its lifespan has never been fully measured.

Yes, it is far more practical to own this car than most people realize.

Why not come in—and see? We are sure you're closer to "The Standard of the World" than you ever thought you were!

Snyder Says Defense Burden Will Be Heavy

Excise Tax On Scarcity Profit Urged

A top Administration economist last night launched a proposal for special excise taxes on goods the high prices of which are the result of scarcity.

Roy Blough, a member of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, made the suggestion in a speech to the Tax Executives' Institute at Lake Placid.

His proposal, in essence, was for a tax designed to equal the "windfall" profit going to a dealer selling an item, the price of which, because of scarcity, has skyrocketed.

Sales at such prices "would enlarge profits without justification," Blough said. It is better, therefore, that the price increases accrue to the benefit of the Government rather than to private persons, he argued.

Blough, newest member of the "Three Wise Men" who are the President's top economic advisory body, pointed out that as raw materials are increasingly devoted to the defense effort, civilian commodities made of steel, aluminum, rubber and copper will become scarcer.

In World War II, he said, they were reduced practically to zero, so that the problem of scarcity could be handled by rationing. In the present defense effort, he forecast, there will be shortages, but not sufficiently severe ones to be met by rationing.

As a result, he said, continuing demand for the articles will force up prices. The result would be windfall profits to the sellers. Rather than have this happen, he suggested, there should be excise taxes on the articles sufficiently high to absorb the excess demand.

The idea of such compensatory excise taxes has been privately discussed among Administration economists, but its mention by Blough was the first public proposal by an official in the White House family since the military program began.

Blough's speech also appeared to be the first gun in a new Administration campaign to concentrate on the taxation method as a means to stop inflation.

He expressed frank and blunt fears that the present wave of enthusiasm in Congress and the public in favor of "pay-as-we-go" taxes to finance the whole of the new defense program would not last.

The cost of a total war could not be born on a pay-as-we-go basis, Blough said. But, he declared, he was sure that he present rearmament effort could be met by current taxation. There is general agreement now on the desirability of doing this, he went on, but "it may not be rooted in very deep earth.

"I fear that when the American public sees what is involved in paying for the defense program through taxes," Blough continued, "there are influential groups which will discover that there are other, "better" ways of financing the defense effort, i.e. borrowing."

Blough also urged an excess profits tax as desirable in the present situation. He implied that from sheer economic logic, it could be argued this was not a proper kind of levy. But, he said, it "has become a widely recognized symbol of the sincerity of the community effort to prevent a few persons and businessmen from profiting unduly out of the present emergency."

Passage of an excess profits tax is needed to achieve "high public morale" and the willingness of millions of people to work and sacrifice.

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (AP).—Secretary of the Treasury Snyder said today that mobilization will hit the Nation with an impact that few people anticipate.

"I don't think that people have any notion so far," the Secretary said in an interview, "of the size of the defense program this country will get next year after Congress has been at work for a while.

"A quick end to the Korean war," he continued, "will have little or no effect on the Administration's plans to put the country on a strong defense footing.

"Force must be met with force. That is the only language that some nations understand.

"Tax increases all along the line are inevitable."

Snyder was interviewed at the seventy-fifth annual convention of the American Bankers Association, at which he was the guest of honor.

Congress, he pointed out, has committed roughly 30 billion dollars to spend for defense and foreign aid in the fircal year ending June 30, 1951.

That figure, Snyder said, will probably go up materially in the following year.

And most of the money, he said, must come out of taxes.

"I have never seen such wholehearted national support for tax increases to meet defense demands," Snyder said.

Bankers and businessmen, he continued, are interested in preserving the value of the dollar to an unprecedented degree.

"I have been able to find little congressional opposition to increasing taxes, an unsual state of mind for legislators faced with fall elections."

A war profits tax, the Secretary said, is virtually a foregone conclusion. The Treasury, he added, is working in close cooperation with congressional groups to assist in formulating new tax legislation.

The proposed war tax bill, he continued, "is one of the most difficult pieces of legislation I have ever worked on."

Bond Redemption Slower

Snyder stated that the recent increases in the redemption of Government savings, or "E," bonds appeared to have been a temporary trend. He indicated that for a short period many people, touched with a buying panic by outbreak of the Korean war and fears of quick imposition of Government controls on buying, had cashed their bonds to buy merchandise they figured might be in short supply.

The bankers' association presented a testimonial to the Secretary which said in part:

"Never before in the Treasury's long history have there been such difficult and complex national and international financing problems.

"Our guest of honor (Mr. Snyder) has approached the solution of these problems with poise, patient research, a keen mind, a spirit devoted to the welfare of his country and to the interests of a free world."

In the second-day session the bankers got a going-over from a Senator on the subject of progress in banking and heard a banker urge more savings and less spending as a solution to inflation.

A. L. M. Wiggins, chairman of the Bank of Hartsville, S. C., and of the Atlantic Coast Line and Louisville and Nashville Railroads, said the needs for increasing savings is greater now than ever before.

In particular, he said, there is a need for increased purchases of Government savings bonds.

Nothing the size of the national debt, Wiggins said interest rates on Government securities and interest rates generally are almost completely under the power and control of the Government.

"It is unlikely," he said, "that in the foreseeable future there will be or can be a return to a so-called free money market."

Senator John J. Sparkman of Alabama, a member of the Senate Banking and Currency Committees and chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Small Business, said practically every progressive measure relating to banks has been opposed by bankers.

It was fortunate for banking interests, as well as for the nation, he said, that opposition to establishment of the Federal Reserve system, as well as deposit insurance, was unsuccessful.

Maryland U. Enrollment Drops by 759

The University of Maryland yesterday reported a fall enrollment of 8925 students for College Park courses—a drop of 759 from that of a year ago.

In 1949, a student enrollment was 9684.

A total of 2001 new freshmen enrolled this year. But the student body was depleted by the graduation last June of 2419 seniors—the largest class in the university's history—and losses to the military services, said the college's registrar.

Of the College Park students, 7858 are taking courses on campus. Of these, 6778 are registered for full-time work and 1080 are registered for part-time work. The remainder of the students, 1067, registered for off campus work. These classes are held at Camp Detrick, Bolling Field and the Pentagon.

Yanks Split With Nats, Need Two Wins for Title

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—For a guy who once expressed the hope he would never have to fight Joe Louis, Ezzard Charles is showing considerable bravado only one day in advance of the hour when his date with the Old Bomber will stare him in the face.

Povich

Charles, the man who inherited the title that Louis abdicated last year, was merely one of the fringe of challengers when he pointed out that "Louis is my idol. I wouldn't want to fight him." It could have been a polite pose of respect for Louis, but anyway, Charles said it.

During the last couple of days, at his training camp, the once respectful Charles has been exhibiting a downright sort of cockiness and no apparent trepidation about his date with Louis. He reacted to Sugar Ray Robinson's prediction that Louis would win the fight in 12 rounds by commenting acidly:

"Robinson has the right round, but the wrong man. I'll flatten him. I know Joe needs the money, but I do too. In fact, maybe I need it worse."

LOUIS' opponents in the past often made the same kind of big talk before the fight, only to let their confidence ooze after they stepped into the ring. King Levinsky, Max Baer and Billy Conn were examples. Louis shook 'em all up with an across-the-ring look, even before the fight started. He wasn't mad at any of them, either. The only fellow he says he was ever genuinely sore with before a fight was Tony Galento.

Charles has said enough things before this fight to make Louis a little bit angry, perhaps, but Joe has brushed them off easily. As a partner in the IBC, Louis puts it down to the pre-fight build-up. As usual, Joe hasn't bothered to make any cracks about his opposition. He never did.

Fact is, though that Charles will take some courage into the ring with him. He doesn't scare easily. He hits and runs, but that's his style, and never has connotated any lack of the red, raw stuff. He was asked yesterday if he thought he was in top condition for tomorrow's fight. Charles bespoke his easy attitude:

"If I'm not ready now, I never will be. It's too late to worry."

THE GREAT IMPONDERABLE is, of course, Louis' age. At 36, he confesses his reflexes are slower. "A little slower," he says, but he certainly is no faster than two years ago when he was very slow, and had a dismal time of it trying to catch up with Jersey Joe Walcott, his same age. Louis has always been honest, though, in his own self-estimates.

He doesn't regard tomorrow's fight as a comeback, no matter what the papers say. "I just feel that I took a short vacation from the title and during that time I have boxed 50 or 60 exhibitions," he told a press conference today. "I'm in the best shape I have ever been since the war, and I expect to win by a knockout."

As usual there is nothing boastful about the Old Bomber, and he even had a nice word for Charles in the face of the cockiness in the younger man's camp. "I have trained for 15 rounds," Joe said," because I know Charles is among the best boxers I have met. I don't think he's as good a boxer as Billy Conn, but I think he hits harder. I don't think he will run away like Jersey Joe Walcott."

FOR THOSE who are tempted by the 2 to 1 odds against Charles, and may be investing at that price, there may be one disturbing factor in Ezzard's last pre-fight statement. "I know I can win, a knockout is my main objective," he said. That could be carrying bravado too far. It was when they tried to knock Joe Louis out that a couple of other guys were promptly knocked out.

Billy Conn wasn't content to take Louis' title on points despite his big lead in 13 rounds, and decided to mix it with Joe. They carried Conn out, horizontal. Old Joe Walcott, like Conn, also was ahead of Louis for most of 11 rounds when he tried to swap punches against the ropes instead of staying out of range. His handlers came and got him.

There is a temptation to predict that Charles will beat an aging, slowed-up Louis on points or by cutting him up with that fancy left hand. But as long as Louis is in there with him, Charles will be the night's target for that L-bomb. On the the suspicion of a direct hit, I pick Louis in six.

Tigers Divide With Pesky Browns, Still Trail by 3½

Detroit, Sept. 26 (AP).—Detroit's pennant hopes all but flew out the window as the surprising St. Louis Browns held the tired Tigers to split in today's doubleheader.

George Kell's double with the bases loaded in the eight inning climaxed a four run rally that gave the Tigers a 5-3 victory after the Browns had won the opener 3-1.

The split left the Tigers still 3½ games behind the front-running Yankees who need only three more victories or three more Detroit defeats to clinch the flag.

Checked repeatedly in the first game and for seven innings of the second, the Tigers finally came through in the clutch with a two run rally in the eighth that routed St. Louis starter Cliff Fannin.

The Tigers collected nine hits and drew five walks in the first game but left 12 runners stranded to help Don Johnson gain his sixth triumph in the opener.

It was Johnson's second straight triumph over the Tigers. He whipped them 2-1 in his other start although slugged for 13 hits. Hal Newhouser, first of three Tiger pitchers, gave up all three runs and was charged with his thirteenth defeat.

Stuart Engleberg

12-Year-Old Wins Post's First Contest

A LOT OF "experts" will be blushing today.

A 12-year-old lad selected all 20 winners in The Washington Post's "Pick-the-Winner" football contest and won the coveted trip for two to the North Carolina-Notre Dame game at South Bend Saturday.

Stuart M. Engleberg, 843 Crittenden st. ne., a 7-B student at Taft Junior High, became the youngest winner in the four-year history of The Post's popular contest.

Previous youngest winner was Trygve Tuve, 135 Hesketh st., Chevy Chase, who won twice in 1947 at the tender age of 14.

Stuart whipped through all 20 contest games, unerringly selecting Wyoming over Baylor. His tie-breaking score wasn't necessary, but he had that practically on the nose, too—Virginia, 20; G. W., 7.

Runnersup who both missed only on the Wyoming-Baylor game were Arthur W. Waugh, 1520 Trinidad ave., ne.; and R. C. Mochwart, 2231 California st. nw.

Interrupted from play yesterday afternoon, Stuart took news of his victory like a real champ. Said Stuart: "I was just lucky."

A real boy, the 107-pounder plays a "great deal" of sports. In fact, this isn't his first championship. He won the ping-pong title at Camp Airy, Thurmont, Md., last summer.

His proud and completely amazed father, Norman Engleberg, will accompany Stuart to the Notre Dame game Saturday.

Mr. Engleberg, a GAO attorney, said, "I just can't believe it. I neglected to enter the contest, but I know I wouldn't have been even close. When Stuart told me the teams he picked, I was quick to let him know he had no chance.

"Why this team is a 14-point underdog, I'd tell him, it can't win, and so on. Now, I'm afraid he will lose confidence in me."

Williams Gets Split Decision Over Salas

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

The slashing, stabbing left hand of Lightweight Champion Ike Williams earned him a 10-round split decision over Welterweight Contender Charley Salas at Griffith Stadium last night.

A slim crowd of 1139 chilled fight fans saw Williams outbox his heavier opponent by the narrowest of margins. Only at one point, the sixth round, was either in trouble.

Then Williams opened up a gash over Salas' right eye and jolted him several times with lefts and rights. It looked for a moment like Williams might be on the way to a knockout victory but Salas rode out the round and Ike was never able to get in an effective shot at the injured eye.

Salas showed a healthy respect for Ike's punching prowess and kept him tied up most of the fight.

After a fast first round in which both repeatedly traded hard, roundhouse rights, the bout resembled wrestling more than

In Football Contest

Virginia-Penn Game Hard One to Pick

VIRGINIA AGAINST PENN at Franklin Field, Philadelphia.

This is another of the "Big Games" in The Washington Post's Pick-The-Winners Football Contest this week.

Last year Virginia defeated Penn, 26-14, for the first time in a rivalry dating back to 1890.

Virginia opened its 1950 season last week, defeating George Washington University, 19-0. Penn will make its first start in the Virginia game, but Penn spanked Maryland University in a pre-season scrimmage.

The winner of the contest this week will receive two tickets to the Tennessee-Duke game at Durham, N. C., October 7, as well as first-class, round-trip transportation for two persons. The experts have rated Duke and Tennessee among the Nation's top collegiate teams this season, and the game in Durham will be played before a capacity crowd of 55,000.

Griffs Take First, Scare Bombers In Second Game

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

NEW YORK, Sept. 26.—The Nats threw a delaying action at the Yankees' pennant rush today by up-ending them, 11-9, in the first game of a double header before the Yankees salvaged the second contest, 10-7.

Nevertheless the Yankees punched a bit closer to the pennant despite their mere even break today. Out in Detroit, the second-place Tigers were dividing a pair with the Browns and gaining no ground.

For the Yankees, the pleasant prospect now is that they can clinch the pennant by winning only two of their remaining four games—at Philadelphia and Boston—no matter what the Tigers may achieve in their remaining five.

There was a mild fright for the Yankees and their 19,610 customers that they might blow both games to the Nats, who pulled up to a close 6-5 score in the seventh inning of the second contest before a tired Sid Hudson finally pitched it away.

Withstand Rally

The Nats were able to withstand a six-run Yankee seventh inning and win the first game for Al Sima. He had been blessed at that point with a 9-1 lead, happily. Mickey Harris finally got the side out for him.

Tommy Byrne didn't last out the first inning of that game, with a display of wildness that led to four quick Washington runs. Jack Sanford was the victim of another four-run inning.

Hudson was the victim of three errors, and four unearned Yankee runs in that second game. The Nats knocked out Joe Ostowski, but the Yanks unloaded 14 hits against Hudson and Harris.

At the finish of the second game, needing three runs to tie the score, the Nats had two men on base before Gil Coan obliged the Yanks with the final out on a ground ball to Rizzuto.

Yanks Get Four in First

As if beating the Yanks a double header was almost too much of a task, the Nats' spotted 'em a 4-0 lead in the first inning of the second game. Hudson was asking for trouble with his wildness and forced home the first run. Yost messed it up for him with a fumble of Bauer's grounder, and another scored. Coleman singled in the third and fourth.

The Nats pounded Joe Ostrowski out of the box in the fifth to cut the Yanks' lead to 5-2, but Rookie Ernie Nevel stopped 'em at that point. Continuing to rap Hudson smartly, the Yanks ran their lead to 6-2 in the sixth after Rizzuto doubled and DiMaggio singled.

In the seventh, the Nats got back in the ball game. They knocked Nevel out with a three-run assault to cut the Yanks' lead to 6-5. A walk to Vernon and Stewart's single started it.

Dente Hits Double

Dente got a run home with a double to left and Al Evans singled two more in. Tom Ferrick moved in and knocked down Hudson's drive into the box to end the inning.

Hudson was a tired pitcher in the Yankee seventh and the Yanks staged a three-run inning. He walked Coleman and was smacked for a triple by Woodling and a double by Rizzuto, Mickey Harris took over, and the Yanks came up with another run on a wild throw by Dente to first base. Dente was trying for a double play after catching DiMag's liner.

That made it 9-5. Yankees, a lead more to their liking.

The Nats came up with a run off Ferrick in the eighth on Yost's double and Coan's single.

Tommy Byrne messed it up quickly for the Yanks in that first game. He walked four men in the first inning, hit one, forced

Irish, Army, Michigan Still Rated 1-2-3 Even Though They Haven't Played a Game

By Leo H. Petersen
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (U.P.).—Despite some outstanding performances by major teams and the fact that the Fighting Irish have not yet been tested, Notre Dame won top place in the first weekly ratings of college football teams by the United Press Board of Football Coaches.

The 35 coaches who make up the board gave due recognition for the victories turned in last week by Georgia, California, Southern Methodist, Michigan State, U. C. L. A., Kentucky and others, but still rated Notre Dame the No. 1 team with Army second and Michigan third.

Like Notre Dame, Navy and Michigan do not open their seasons until Saturday. The South Bend powerhouse, which opens against North Carolina, received 27 first place votes and a total of 318 points against 25 first place choices and 311 points in the coaches pre-season ratings.

Army, which opens against Colgate, received five first-place votes and 293 points, while Michigan rolled up a total of 201 points. The Wolverines open Saturday against Michigan State.

Georgia, Southern Methodist, and California impressed the coaches the most with their victories over the football's season first weekend. By secret ballot the coaches rate the Nation's top 10 teams in order each week for the United Press ratings, with 10 points being awarded for a first-place vote, nine for second and so on down to one point for tenth place.

Victors over heavily favored Maryland, 27 to 7, Georgia's Bulldogs received a total of 78 points, which ranked them eighth. They failed to receive a single vote in the preseason ballot of the coaches.

As a result of its defeat, Maryland, which rated twelfth in the preseason voting, failed to receive a single point.

Louis 2-1 to Regain Title Against Ezzard Charles Tonight

20 Million May See Match on Television

By Gayle Talbot

NEW YORK, Sept. 26 (AP).—Joe Louis and Ezzard Charles, their hard training finished, exercised only lightly at their camps today and were reported ready and rearing for tomorrow night's heavyweight title fight at Yankee Stadium.

The city remained calm. Even with fine, clear weather forecast for fight time at 10 p. m. (EST), the ticket sale did not spurt and the promoters were resigned at a gross gate of under $200,000. This would be, roughly, $62,000 less than was paid to see Willie Pep lose his featherweight title to Sandy Saddler three weeks ago.

It is not that the name of Joe Louis has lost its magnetic quality. But the word has been spread by every medium available that Joe and Ezzard will fight before the television cameras and it has had a distressing effect upon the box office.

Louis' effort to become the first heavyweight in history to regain the big title will be screened in the homes and taverns of 32 principal cities. One estimate, perhaps not too far off, is that an audience of 20 million will watch the two men in the great arena Babe Ruth built.

As for the result of tomorrow night's 15-rounder, the guessing still is wide open. A majority of the assembled newspaper experts favor the 36-year-old Louis to win back his title, to kayo Charles, the N. B. A. recognized champion, "the first time he hits him good."

But more than a few pick Charles—not only writers, but managers of fighters and others who have had to be more than a little alert to make their living from the devious game.

The odds remained a steady 2-to-1 against Charles in man-to-man betting—what little there was. It was said that 5 to 1 could be obtained against Charles' chances by winning by a knockout. Ezzard's supporters were understood to be grabbing some of this, figuring it to be an overlay.

Ezzard, himself, gave out a fiery statement in which he declared that the odds were ridiculous and that "I expect to score a technical knockout no later than the twelfth round. Joe can be chopped up like any other old guy."

Konstanty Blows But Phils Win

BOSTON, Sept. 26 (AP).—Jim Konstanty failed in his record-breaking seventy-first relief job today but his Philadelphia Phillies rallied to whip Boston, 8-7. Blix Donnelly stopped the Braves after Konstanty blew a lead in the seventh inning.

The uphill victory reduced the Phils clinching combination to three and mathematically eliminated third-place Boston. Any pairing of three Phil wins or Brooklyn defeats will nail down a pennant for Philadelphia.

VMI's True 'T' Has GW Worried

'Undefeated' Hoyas Work to Stay That Way

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Georgetown, only undefeated major team in the District, will be hard-pressed to still have the distinction after its opener at Penn State Saturday.

The early line quotes the Nittany Lions favored from seven to 14 points. It probably isn't out of line.

Penn State, after playing in the Cotton Bowl the season before, had what it called a bad year last season. In a bad year, State trounced Boston College, Nebraska, Syracuse, West Virginia and Temple. True, it lost four, but the victors were Army, Villanova, Michigan State and Pitt.

It looks like it will be strictly a sophomore year for Georgetown Coach Bob Margarita, starting his second year himself.

At the moment, four sophs are listed on the first offensive club, Tackle Jim Schenk, Guard Mike Carra, Left Half Art Gulla and Fullback Gino Pagluica. Six up from the frosh are on the top defensive team, Tackles Bill McCarthy and John Dunn, Guard John McGinn, Center Jim Slowey and Backs Bugs Thompson and Bill Fisher.

Margarita has been known to say that a sophomore team won't win ball games. He's just hoping their speed and spirit will overcome the handicap of inexperience.

Margarita professes to know little about Penn State's personnel. However, Coach Rip Engel fears that Bob, former Brown great, knows too much about his tricky winged-T offense.

Asked if it's true, Margarita merely smiled, "I hope so."

New Formation Confused W. & M.

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

At George Washington's public training camp at Frog Island, Va., Coach Bo Rowland yesterday was trying to work up a defense against the latest wrinkle in T-formation football... VMI's so-called "true T."

The Colonials will be exposed to it Friday night when they face Keydets at Alexandria's GW High stadium.

Assistant coaches Roger Antaya and Tim Swett came back from VMI's 25-19 upset over William and Mary last Saturday with an awesome report on the new variation, and since then the Colonial frosh have been frantically trying to pattern a system for scrimmages against the varsity.

The true T is the invention of VMI's imaginative young coach, Tom Nugent, who is just a year out of the high school ranks.

His line is arrayed as is in the conventional split T with the quarterback just behind center. However, the three other backs are in a straight line behind the quarterback, and perpendicular to the line. It's a T with the line as the top bar on the letter.

Nugent conjured up the formation last summer and paid the old master, Frank Leahy, a visit in South Bend. They discussed it, and Leahy told Nugent he had never seen anything like it before.

"It looks good on paper, let's see how it will work in a game," the Notre Dame coach said. Nugent came back to Lexington, Va., and spent a couple of weeks at the drawing board.

Then powerful North Carolina came up for a scrimmage, and VMI astonished Tar Heel Coach Carl Snavely by outscoring his team, four touchdowns to one. Nugent pledged Snavely to secrecy, telling him he wanted to spring it by surprise on William and Mary in their opener.

What a surprise it turned out to be! The Indians, three touchdown favorites, were thrown into confusion by the "true T," and the Keydets became the first Virginia school to beat them since 1939.

Mrs. Howard Wins

Mrs. Rex Howard won the women's "Orchid" golf tournament at Kenwood Country Club yesterday with 81—9—72. Mrs. J. P. Trouchaud won low gross with 84. Mrs. Ralph Sewell, 98—23—75, won second low net. Winners received white and purple orchids.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Sept. 26 (AP).—Golf pro Skip Alexander, who was injured in a plane crash Sunday night, remained in "quite serious condition at Deaconess Hospital tonight.

Hospital attendants said he was "holding his own" but was still in an oxygen tent.

Rosen's 37th Homer Helps Tribe, 2 to 0

CLEVELAND, Sept. 26 (AP).—Al Rosen smacked his thirty-seventh home run of the season tonight helping the Cleveland Indians beat the Chicago White Sox, 2-0. It was the eighteenth win of the season for Pitcher Early Wynn who gave up six hits.

Frank Heyer's 71 Leads Qualifiers

Belle Haven's Commander Frank Heyer lead opening day qualifiers in Washington Golf and Country Club's Invitational golf tournament with a one-over-par 71 yesterday.

Only 40 of the field of 270 golfers qualified yesterday. The other 230 will compete today for 80 qualifying places in five flights.

Yanks Split, Lead by 3½

two runs across the plate and was banged for a two-run single by Grasso that gave the Nats a 4-0 lead. Byrne didn't last the inning out.

Irv Noren's triple gave the Nats another run in the second and in the fifth Mickey Vernon led off with a homer. Jack Sanford's wildness and Eddie Yost's two-run single made it another four-run inning for the Nats, and at that point they had a 9-1 lead, and were looking very Yankee-like.

Hank Bauer's homer in the second was the only run off Sima for six innings, and he was pitching a four-hitter when the game almost blew up in his face. He had two Yankees out and none on when a third strike to Coleman got away from Grasso for an error and a panic began.

Before it was over the Yanks had five more hits and six more runs and the Nats' lead was cut to 10-7. Jack Jensen whacked a two-run triple. Billy Martin, a single, and Yogi Berra a big double. Rookie Julio Moreno replaced Sima, and was banged for a triple to center by Joe DiMaggio. Mize followed with a single for the sixth run of the inning before Mickey Harris moved in and got 'em out.

Gil Coan gave Harris the comfort of another run by leading off the eighth with a homer to make it 11-7, but in the ninth the Nats' southpaw suddenly found the Yanks with the tying run on base.

Yogi Berra banged him for a homer at the start of the ninth, and Johnny Hopp got on base with a bunt, Bauer singled, and a walk to Brown filled the bases. A run scored on Coleman's fly, but Pinch-hitter Gene Woodling was Harris' meat. He took the last two strikes with the bat on his shoulder.

Bill Bennings

Dear Folks:

Jockey Mike Sarno who has been grounded for a year for associating with some characters has been reinstated. Sarno, who could have made a living on the half milers, now must buck the big-time riders at the milers—until Charles Town anyway. Doyle Gardners was the riding champion at Marlboro but the handicapping title went to Mrs. Bennings Lovely Boy. The stables that burned out in the fire will be replaced by cinder-block barns of the sort used at Bowie. No racing in Maryland until Bowie opens the major fall season on Saturday. By the way, next Tuesday, October 3, will be an off day at that track.

BILL.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Klutz

Fund Shortage Slows Expansion Plans for Social Security Work

The expansion of Federal agencies to carry out the new Social Security law will be much slower than had been planned.

A half-dozen different agencies requested funds to hire about 7000 new employes to handle an additional 10 million persons under Social Security. Funds finally appropriated by Congress won't be enough to take on 3000 persons.

The Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance was cut from $14,500,000 to eight million dollars which means it won't be able to set up records for the 10 million new persons covered, or to act on all the benefit claims of an estimated million more persons during this fiscal year. Internal Revenue was cut from $3,770,000 to $2,500,000. It must collect Social Security taxes.

Between them, the two agencies requested funds to hire 6700 new employes. Similar cuts were made in the budgets of other Federal Security and Treasury agencies that will help to administer the law.

VETERANS PREFERENCE: The Defense Secretary has been asked what constitutes "active duty" for military reservists. Specifically, the Civil Service Commission wants to know if a reserve officer who is called up for a physical exam is on "active duty" status and automatically becomes eligible for veterans' preference.

The commission is certain the Defense Secretary will say the mere order to report for a physical does not constitute active duty service under the law for a reservist. But when his answer is made, the commission will issue regulations to the agencies covering it.

As matters now stand, the commission is of the opinion that it would have to extend veterans' preference to any reservist who is called up for a physical since he's told he's on active duty status, and the law extends preference to any person on active duty.

PERSONALS: At FCC, Robert W. Cox, a member of the Arlington County board, has been promoted to assistant executive officer; Eric C. Stewart of the Budget Bureau, was appointed planning officer, and Richard Solan of the personnel office, was promoted to be assistant to the executive officer . . . At National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, eight of its long-time employes yesterday were given emblems for meritorious service: Frank J. Clarke, Edgar N. Hammerly, Richard V. Rhodes, Louis V. Lawhorn, Joseph F. Vanier, John W. Ebert, Marie F. Schmid, and William M. Thompson.

NPA: Commerce's new National Production Authority will issue its first major order to channel critical materials into defense weapons within a few days. The order will set up a priorities and allocation system on steel and other scarce materials.

The decision to set up the priorities and allocation system will mean the NPA will be hiring several hundred employes soon merely to process the many thousands of applications that will be made under it.

GSA: The General Services Administration has set up 10 regional offices and all of its field operations will be consolidated in them. One of the offices is to be located here to cover this city, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands. The director is to be William A. Miller, a former division engineer for Public Buildings . . . NAVAL GUN FACTORY: Retiring this week are Walter J. Stewart, a machinist with 30 years of Federal service, and William M. Richardson, a chauffeur who was given Navy's top safety award after he drove more than 16 years without an accident.

PAY-FOR-JOBS: Several more employes called me yesterday to say that they, too, were referred to Government jobs by private employment agencies—at a price.

Do they have to pay a fee to the private employment agencies for finding them Federal jobs? Civil Service merely says: (1) It has no control over any such private arrangements; (2) that jobhunters should use its free service, and (3) the Senate has passed a bill which is stymied in the House that would prevent a charge being made for finding a person a Federal job.

Two Boys Safe as 50 Firemen Search Five Blocks of Sewers

Two panic-stricken boys of 12 touched off an eerie search of Alexandria's stormwater sewers late yesterday when they told police they became lost under the city with seven other children.

Armed with floodlights and gas masks, more than 50 Alexandria firemen combed five blocks of the city's main storm sewer before they found that the other children also had found their way out.

Sewer Search Begun

Almost incoherent, the boys told police they entered the sewer at an open end five blocks away with two other boys. They said they saw another group of five children, including two small girls, start into the sewer.

Before police could get the names and addresses of all nine children and check on their whereabouts, firemen and rescue workers started through the sewer, a circular tube six feet in diameter, used to carry away flood waters Normally—and as it was yesterday—only a trickle of water runs. Gas masks were carried in case noxious fumes were found.

After more than an hour of detective work, Alexandria police pieced together this story:

Young Martin and young Almond started into the sewer at about 5:30 p. m., with Bobby Wells, 11, 3105 Montross st., and Teddy Daniels, 12, 304 East Glebe rd.

Slips, Cuts Head

After chasing Martin and Almond for more than 100 yards, Wells and Daniels turned back and left the sewer the way they had entered. Martin and Almond continued for more than 200 yards until they came to an open manhole and scrambled out.

During the chase, Martin slipped and cut his head. He was taken to Alexandria Hospital and treated for minor scalp lacerations.

Through young Wells, police learned the name of one of the members of the other group and discovered that these five had entered the sewer, but had turned back after going only a short distance.

They were Darline Hinesley, 10, of 10 W. Glebe rd., and her 8-year-old brother, Paul, Carroll Lee, 6, of the same address, Sharon Cooper, 14, of 14 W. Glebe rd., and her sister, Karen, 4.

While police were struggling to find out which children were there, one father called the station to report that his 6½-year-old son had been missing since 4 p. m.

At last reports, all Alexandria children under 12 were in bed.

Alcohol Ban Near Arlington Schools Asked

The Arlington School Board last night asked the county government to ban the carrying of alcoholic beverages on or near school grounds.

In a formal resolution, the school board asked the Arlington County Board to pass an ordinance "forbidding the carrying of alcoholic beverages on school grounds or property adjacent to school grounds."

The action followed an incident Saturday night during a Washington-Lee High School game when three youths who had been drinking became involved in a fracas with five Arlington County policemen. The youths were in Arlington County Court Monday. Two drew fines and sentences and the third was fined as a result of the fracas.

In other actions last night, the school board asked Mrs. Elizabeth P. Campbell, its chairman, to appoint an advisory committee on school construction. A membership of 20 persons, including architects, builders, suppliers, businessmen and contractors, was suggested for the committee.

The board also heard Reed K. Pond, chairman of the Citizens Committee on School Improvement, read a letter commending the board on its purchase of a warehouse. The letter criticized John Locke Green, Arlington County treasurer, for his "absurd and ridiculous" impeding of the school board's program.

Green Admits Own Role In Building Deal

Arlington Treasurer Acted Privately; Denies He Knew Of County Interest

Arlington Treasurer John Locke Green, who is blocking School Board purchase of a $299,750 warehouse, admitted in court yesterday he tried unsuccessfully to have sale of the building delayed for a week in July for a legal client.

Green, who also is a private attorney, testified in Arlington Circuit Court as the school board opened its case to force him to sign a check paying for the warehouse the board bought last month.

The treasurer said he acted as attorney for a warehouse stockholder "as a favor" to him and no longer represented him.

Green said he "did not know" at the time that the school board was interested in the warehouse.

School Officials Testify

At the end of the day-long hearing, school officials testified the school board still has $1,133,969 that is not earmarked in its school bond kitty—more than enough to pay for the warehouse.

Green yesterday reiterated his reasons for refusing to pay the school check. Board members lack money "that hasn't already been contracted for," to pay for the warehouse, he said.

And the bond money, as approved by Arlington voters, "was not intended for the purchase of a warehouse," Green added.

Douglas' Statement Challenged

Green, acting as his own attorney, challenged the statement of School Board counsel Lawrence Douglas that an "unpledged and unallocated balance" is available for the warehouse, at 1426 N. Quincy st. near Washington-Lee High School.

Meanwhile, the School Board revealed it would have to refuse all but 6000 pounds of 28,800 free pounds of frozen turkey offered by the Federal school lunch program, because it still lacks adequate cold storage facilities that would have been available in the warehouse.

School officials said they found private storage facilities for 6000 pounds of the surplus turkey at a cost of $1 per bird. The warehouse also would be used for vocational shops, storage, and office space.

Settlement House Fights Tax Order

Friendship House, Community Chest-supported settlement house in Southeast Washington, has locked horns again with the District Commissioners over tax exemption.

The outcome of the litigation, due to break out within two weeks, may have a direct effect on the tax status of seven similar settlement houses. All are presently tax-free, a Community Chest spokesman said.

The Commissioners ruled last June that Friendship is not a "public charity" and therefore its property was ordered returned to the tax rolls.

E. J. Goodrich, chairman of the board of Friendship, yesterday said the Commissioners' order will be resisted vigorously and the case again appealed to the Board of Tax Appeals. The tax due is about $2200, he said.

Special Order

The settlement house, which serves as a recreation and educational center for all ages, was ordered tax-exempt by a special order of the Commissioners in February of 1938. Three years later the District government ordered taxable the portion of the building where staff members are quartered.

Friendship fought this partial taxation, involving $598.50, in a protracted hearing before the Board of Tax Appeals—and won a decision on January 12.

The board took the position that activities at Friendship are the type requiring employes to live on the premises.

Tax Ruling Made

Reversing the tax board ruling, the Commissioners last June said the entire Friendship property at 619 D st. se., must be taxed. The city heads acted on an opinion, written by assistant corporation counsel George C. Updegraph. It said, in part:

"It (Friendship) clearly is not organized or operated for purposes of public charity. . . . Rather, it is operated primarily for mutual benefit and the private gain of members thereof."

Both Goodrich and Community Chest officials said the settlement is wholly non-profit in operation. For the current year the Community Chest contributed $43,003 to Friendship. Private sources furnished $29,475.

In a subsequent letter to the Commissioners, Goodrich wrote he felt it "a little short of outrageous that the Commissioners, in defiance of the unappealed decision of the Board of Tax Appeals, should force this charitable organization" to spend its funds and energies in another tax fight.

LONG AND SHORT OF IT—Mama Giraffe bends down to give an affectionate lick to newborn Claire, who straightens up for a good look at the wide, wide world

By Melvin Altshuler
Post Reporter

From the Zoo comes much news, all of it quite good.

First off, two giraffes named Bob and Kitty, became parents again Monday night.

It's a girl giraffe, clumsy and graceful all at the same time, and her name is Claire.

"Claire is just a name that I happened to think of," said Zoo Director William M. Mann.

Claire looks more like mom, as far as coloring goes, than her dad. She measures six feet from the tip of her horns to the ground. She was born at 11 p. m. Monday.

She learned to walk right off. But she is having trouble sitting down. A keeper helps her do that. A keeper is also needed to get her up, once she's down. Her legs are too much every which way.

It being her third baby, Kitty took it well. Bob yesterday afternoon appeared a bit fractious.

Bears were next on yesterday's Zoo gazette.

Gene, the hybrid offspring of hybrid bears (and a rarity for that reason), and Smoky are sharing the same cage.

"Getting along fine," said Doc Mann. "You know, we have to watch them the first few days to make sure all goes well."

With Gene and Smokey, it's a case of opposite personalities complementing each other.

Having been rescued by humans from a forest fire, Smokey seems to have an affinity for people—a regular extrovert. Gene's an introvert; just lumbers around, not paying much attention to humans.

They wrestle occasionally. Gene's heavier, but Smokey is faster.

Third item is that the roof of the pachyderm house—elephants, the hippos et al.—is being repaired. It had been declared unsafe and through most of the summer the building has been closed to humans.

Another recent repair job in the pachyderm house was the removal of the barrier that separated Jennie, a young female elephant, from Ashok and Shanti, the two baby elephants presented by Indian Prime Minister Nehru.

Jennie and Shanti, also a girl elephant, have always been pally through the bars of the barrier. Ashok ignored them. Now all three of them—it's a fact that should be noted, this triangle—are getting along famously.

Last item on today's report is the arrival Saturday of two black-necked Argentine swans, male and female. There's a male of the species—cygnus melancorpus, by the way—already in the swan-and-duck enclosure.

The recently arrived male and the male long in residence have been trading dirty looks.

Foes of Pepco Rate Boost Get Delay to Study Survey

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

The Potomac Electric Power Co. rate hearing before the District Public Utilities Commission was recessed yesterday until October 19 over the protest of Pepco Attorney James F. Reilly.

After only a partial cross-examination of Pepco witnesses, attorneys for the Capital Transit Co. and the Federal Government asked for a four-week recess in which to study the "cost of service" survey submitted by Pepco Monday.

Reilly protested that the intervening parties already had been given five weeks to prepare cross-examination and said he had given them copies of the cost study a week ago. He reluctantly suggested a two weeks' recess. The PUC compromised and allowed three weeks.

Pepco has asked permission to increase rates by 9½ percent to support a 130-million-dollar expansion program. It estimated the increase would bring in an additional 3½ million dollars in the next year.

The cost survey purported to show that Capital Transit and the District Government—and to a lesser extent the Federal Government—are not paying their fair share of Pepco's total costs. The residential and small business customers are making up the difference, it showed.

In cross examination yesterday afternoon, Federal Government Attorney John J. Kirby stated that under the requested higher rates reduction totaling $451,000 a year would be given some customers. This means, he said, that the rest would actually pay $3,951,000 more a year, instead of $3,500,000.

The Federal Government faces one of the biggest rate boosts if the requests are granted—roughly 10 percent above the $6,078,000 it paid in 1949.

Pepco Rate Engineer Herbert F. G. Main said the purpose of the reduction in some rates was to get each class of customer to pay its fair share." He would not accept Kirby's $451,000 figure without further checking, but he said customers benefiting most from the reductions would be "master meter" apartment house owners, where the owner is billed for all electricity used.

The change from commercial to "fairer" residential schedules would save these customers $200,000 or 10 percent a year, Main said. Some residential customers in nearby Maryland and Virginia would also get reductions because of zone changes, Main said.

Earlier in the day Pepco Treasurer R. Roy Dunn admitted that Pepco's financing of its construction program this year and in 1949 had been "successful" under existing rates. But Dunn added that the present earnings of the company are not sufficient to protect the company's 90-cent stock dividend, Dunn said he felt the company had a moral obligation not to reduce the dividend.

Woman Hangs Self on Cellar Clothesline

A certificate of suicide has been issued in the case of Mrs. Emma Moser, 72, of Trenton, N. J., who hanged herself in her sister's cellar sometime Monday night.

Mrs. Moser's sister, Mrs. Ward Nichols of 4439 Harrison st. nw., said she awoke at about 5:45 a. m. Tuesday and noticed that her sister was not in her room across the hall. She found her hanging at the foot of the cellar steps. Mrs. Nichols said a cellar clothes line had been used.

Members of the family said Mrs. Moser had recently been a pneumonia patient at Suburban Hospital in Bethesda.

Mrs. Moser is survived by Mrs. Nichols, a daughter, Mrs. Edwin Midkiss of Trenton, N. J., and two brothers, Wilbur Goddard of Trenton, N. J. and Edward G. Goddard of Burlington, N. J.

Rios Bridoux Blamed for Air Tragedy Killing 55

CAB Says Bolivian Caused Disaster; 'Poor Judgment' Imputed to Tower

By Benjamin Bradlee
Post Reporter

The Civil Aeronautics Board yesterday blamed Bolivian pilot Erick Rios Bridoux for the disaster last November 1 in which 55 Eastern Airlines passengers and crew were killed near National Airport.

Bridoux was the only survivor of the tragedy.

The CAB also "imputed poor judgment" to the men in the control tower for their handling of of Bridoux's P-38 and the commercial DC-4 before they collided in the air.

The findings were made public in a 25-page investigation report.

Bridoux has already been blamed for the crash by the Civil Aeronautics Administration, which enforces CAB's flying regulations. He has been sued for $500,000 by Eastern Air Lines.

Plunged Into River

The CAB completed hearings Monday on whether to revoke his United States flying license. He has been grounded by the U. S. since the crash. He is now in Bolivia.

The disaster occurred about 11:46 a. m., November 1, as both planes were coming in to land. The faster P-38 crashed into the airliner from above, and both planes plunged into the Potomac.

The probable cause of the accident, the CAB determined yesterday, "was the execution of a straight-in final approach by the P-38 pilot (Bridoux), without obtaining proper clearance to land and without exercising necessary vigilance."

"The tower did not act with the requisite caution," the report continued, "but this cannot be said to have contributed to the cause of the accident.

"Poor Judgment"

"We impute poor judgment to the tower in its adherence to the single course of guiding and corrective action which it selected, even though normally it had every right to expect such action to be effective.

"Full alertness and dispatch on the part of personnel trained to anticipate and cope with critical traffic situations called for an earlier effort to notify Eastern's pilot of the position and course of the P-38 in an additional effort to avoid the collision.

"We cannot, however, under all the circumstances — and particularly (Bridoux') unpredictable actions — assert that a different or additional course of action by the tower in the time available . . . to reasonably select such action, would have averted the accident."

At the time of the crash it was the worst air disaster in the Nation's history.

The report was signed by CAB members Oswald Ryan, Josh Lee, Harold A. Jones and Russell B. Adams.

Says Pilot Confused

Bridoux "was confused as to his location," the report said, and so required an unusually rapid rate of descent. The Eastern airliner was cleared to land "number one" at 11:44 a. m. Instructions were given to Bridoux to circle to the left and call the tower when west of the field, the report said. These instructions were neither acknowledged nor complied with, the CAB found.

Bridoux was then told to make a 360-degree turn to the left and land "number two."

Both planes continued on their fatal path. The tower frantically told Bridoux, "Clear to the left; clear to the left." The Bolivian said he heard this transmission, but did not know to whom it was addressed. The tower then told the Eastern airliner to turn left, but less than five degrees of this turn was completed when the impact came.

Ancell to Urge Vote On Pollution Bonds

12 Homeless, 5 Hurt in 3 Nearby Fires

By V. R. Montanari
Post Reporter

Three families were left homeless, five firemen suffered minor injuries and a score of restaurant patrons were routed yesterday in three separate fires in the Alexandria-Fairfax area.

In the most serious blaze a four-bedroom bungalow at Lincolnia, Va., was demolished by flames, leaving 12 persons without a home. Occupants of the dwelling were Mr. and Mrs. Willie Parker and their 11-year-old son, Billy; Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Penn and their children, Diane, 1, and Tony, 2, and Mr. and Mrs. Sterling Penn and their three children, Gayle, 2; Wayne, 1, and Juell, 1 month old.

The three men, who work for the same employer, were on a construction job in Silver Spring when the blaze broke out shortly after noon. They did not learn of the first until they came home from work.

Firemen from Franconia, Baiey's Crossroads and Annandale arrived to find the home burned down. According to Parker, "none of us saved as much as a pocket handkerchief."

The families were given temporary shelter by neighbors last night.

Three Alexandria firemen suffered from smoke inhalation and two others received minor burns at about 3:30 a. m. yesterday in a basement fire at 719 S. Columbus st., Alexandria. The blaze caused damage exceeding $2000 to the home of Mrs. Pearl King.

The injured firemen, all of Alexandria's No. 4 Company, were Capt. J. L. Carver, Chester Roland and Roland Lambeth, treated for smoke inhalation; and Broaddus Carver and Woodrow Corbin, treated for minor burns.

A fire at the Hot Shoppe restaurant in the 900 block of N. Washington st., Alexandria, caused damage estimated at several thousand dollars and routed late breakfasters from the front dining room around 10 a. m. yesterday. Alexandria firemen said the blaze apparently started in a kitchen airduct, where a volume of grease had accumulated.

Deanwood Citizens Hear Plans for Improvements

Holding their first meeting of the season, at Carver School, Whittingham and Lame pl. ne., the Deanwood Citizens' Association last night heard S. R. Harrison, Deputy Director of Highways for the District, give an outline of plans for improvements in the area.

The association will hold election of officers at its next meeting October 24.

Citizens and organizations interested in cleaning up the polluted Potomac River got a ray of hope yesterday from City Manager W. Guy Ancell of Alexandria.

Ancell said he would recommend to his City Council a bond issue referendum for construction of a sewage treatment plant—something the city has never had—as soon as the annexation suit against Fairfax County is settled.

He expects a settlement by January 1.

At present prices, a sewage treatment plant adequate for foreseeable future needs would cost Alexandria about $4,000,000, City Engineer C. Luckett Watkins estimated yesterday.

At the same time, J. W. Brookfield, president of the Alexandria Izaak Walton League, which has been pushing for a cleanup on conservationist grounds, said he was about to prod City Council members on the issue.

Candidates Polled

During the last city election campaign, the league asked all candidates if they favored an immediate sewage disposal plant for the city. All the present councilmen except Albert A. Smoot said yes, Brookfield said. He will ask all the councilmen except Smoot by letter why they haven't done anything about it, he announced.

Mayor Franklin P. Backus indicated he and most of the other councilmen would be receptive to a treatment plant financed by a revenue bond issue, after the annexation settlement—but only if neighboring communities act on their sewage disposal problems, he said yesterday.

"It would be ridiculous to do anything by ourselves," he said. "The city of Alexandria used to be surrounded by boundaries—Four Mile Run, the Potomac River, and Hunting Creek. Now it's surrounded by sewers."

Potential "Open Sewer"

In that, Mayor Backus agreed with Harold A. Kemp, District of Columbia Sanitary Engineer, who declared Saturday that the Potomac River below Hains Point is so polluted it threatens to become and open sewer.

However, Fairfax County has a three million dollar sewage treatment plant in the works, to be paid for from proceeds of a bond issue voted in a referendum last August.

Above Alexandria, Arlington dumps about half of its 12-million-gallon daily flow into the river untreated. The county board has promised action on financing a sewage treatment plant expansion "within six months." Below Alexandria, Fairfax County sewage goes directly into the river.

When the council and the citizens of Alexandria decide on action, they will have to have revised a $50,000 survey and plan made two years ago, assuming the annexation suit is at least partly successful, as Mayor Backus pointed out.

"We wouldn't want to build a treatment plant until we know what we've got to treat," said City Manager Ancell.

Plans in 1948 called for a plant with a capacity adequate for a city of 100,000, city engineer Watkins said. The present population is 61,600.

A site for the plant is available from the purchase of land some five years ago at the south end of S. Payne st., along Hunting Creek, where a city dump is now located. It was regarded in 1945 as a site for a sewage disposal plant. The cost estimate then was $1,500,000.

A revenue bond issue could be sold regardless of the constitutional debt limit on cities, Mayor Backus pointed out. Service on the debt could be financed through a tax added to water rates, although Alexandria's water system is privately owned and operated, he said.

Alexandria Trial Board Names Asked

The Alexandria City Council last night agreed to accept public nominations for a proposed new trial board for city employes.

The council named Member Roy Bragg as chairman of a committee to accept public suggestions for membership on the board, to be created under a recently enacted new city charter. City Manager W. Guy Ancell and City Attorney V. Floyd Williams will serve with him.

The charter provides that the board shall be composed of a minister, an attorney, a doctor and two other citizens. It will act as an appeals board for city employes, including both police and firemen, who may be disciplined by their superiors.

The nominations will be screened by the council committee and submitted to the full council for final selection, city officials said.

The council postponed for two weeks a final decision on disposition of the Old Ramsay House, oldest structure in the city, which has been condemned as a safety hazard. The postponement was granted at the request of Bragg, who said he wanted more time to study possible means of preserving the landmark.

The Alexandria Historical Society, authorized by the council to plan for restoration of the building about four years ago, recently indicated it would have to abandon the project because of a lack of funds.

In other actions, the council appropriated $948 as its share of the expenses of the Northern Virginia Regional Planning Commission; appropriated $2980 for improvements to two schools, and authorized transfer of $11,000 from the city bond account for construction of storm drainage facilities.

It also agreed to ask the Alexandria Housing Authority to make available to the Alexandria Police Boys' Camp the demountable buildings in the Taylor Run Veterans Housing Project. Officials of the Boys' Camp had requested use of one or more of the buildings after learning the housing development is to be vacated by January 1.

Three New Polio Cases Here; Total For Year Is 143

Three new cases of poliomyelitis were reported in the District yesterday, bringing the city's total reported this year to 143 and the Washington area's to 329. This time last year 73 cases had been reported in the District.

The District Health Department announced the new cases included: A 9-year-old boy of the 1500 block of 5th st. nw., admitted to Gallinger Hospital yesterday; a 6-year-old boy of the 4500 block of Georgia ave. nw., admitted to Children's Hospital Monday, and a 42-year-old woman who is being treated at home.

Driver Unhurt As His Truck Smashes Tree

The driver of a delivery truck was unhurt when he smashed into a large tree in the 1600 block of Corcoran st. nw. yesterday.

The impact so weakened the tree that police for a time feared it might topple into a nearby house.

John Williams, 22, of Route 1, Forestville, Md., told police he was forced to swerve to avoid collision with a double-parked taxi.

The cab of his truck grazed a large limb of the tree and the impact forced the back end of the vehicle into the tree. Employes of the District Trees and Parking Division "lassoed" the cracked tree and pulled it down.

A Corporation Counsel's hearing will be held at an unspecified date.

Civic Groups Inquire About Sewer Situation

The Civic Betterment Association voted last night to send a committee to the District Commissioners to ask about the lack of storm sewers in the area.

The group also voted to ask for daily playground supervision between 3 and 6 p. m. at the Nalle School, 49th st. and Bass pl. se., where last night's meeting was held.

Musical D-Day for District

Symphony Drive Launched at Luncheon

By Marie McNair

THE LADIES OF THE National Symphony Orchestra and their aides got a verbal pat on the back at their annual luncheon yesterday opening the ticket sales drive.

Lawrence Tibbett, Metropolitan Opera star, waiting modestly in the wings, came up to the speakers' table in the Mayflower ballroom to compliment the orchestra association on "the magnificent job you are doing in the Capital."

He took time out for a personal greeting to Ray Cox, president of the group, and incidentally did a little advertising for "The Barrier," the musical drama which opened last night at the Gayety with Mr. Tibbett in the leading role.

Gordon Reid, good-looking new chairman of the ticket sales' campaign, introduced Mrs. Hans Klaggsbrun, president of the women's committee, and Mrs. Olive Clapper, handsome in black taffeta with the velvet touch. Mrs. Hugo Black, wife of Justice Black, seated in the row of 15 at the honor table, took a bow in a trim gray tweed suit with black velvet collar and a sweeping black velvet hat.

OTHER CELEBRITIES at the top table were Igor Gorin of the Metropolitan Opera, who like Mr. Tibbett has sung with the National Symphony, and Floyd Blair, former Special Assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury, who now deals with the figures of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

Mr. Blair dealt with facts and figures about the Philharmonic yesterday. The Philharmonic, organized 109 years ago, has 7000 subscribers, plays to 300,000 people in both Carnegie Hall and Lewisohn Stadium each season.

"The Philharmonic has such loyal body of hardworking supporters as here" said Mr. Blair. "It relies on its general appeal to the public."

Mr. Blair emphasized the necessity of the repeal of the Federal admission tax, urged all supporters of the symphony to work for its abolishment.

IN SPITE OF QUARTER of a million-dollar deficit each year, the Philharmonic, which is endowed, can keep playing at least for several years longer. But the tax is a hardship on lesser symphonies and makes it difficult for them to keep going, he pointed out.

The National Symphony Orchestra is celebrating its twentieth anniversary this year. But symphonic music in Washington has a much longer history, Mr. Reid told the gathering. Thomas Jefferson established a "domestic band," writing to a friend in France to find him "some farm hands" who could also be part-time musicians. Only men of "sobriety and good nature" would be accepted, however.

In the expense accounts of George Washington in the year 1783, was the notation, two pounds and six, for two subscriptions for concert series, a fee the National Symphony could undersell today.

MME. DE GOUBAUD-CARRERA, wife of the Guatemalan Ambassador, was ranking guest at the head table. The Earl Jellicoe, First Secretary of the British Embassy, was also a special guest. Others were Garrison Norton, former Assistant Secretary of State; Mrs. Oliver Gasch (Sylvia Meyer, the symphony's harpist) Howard Mitchell, the symphony's conductor; Charles B. Dulcan, Mrs. Frank Jelleff, and Mrs. Peter Belin who wore a beige jersey frock with hat to match.

Seated here and there throughout the room were Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt; Mrs. Ellen Woodward; Mrs. Raymond Cox wearing a tiny pillbox perched on her high coiled hair; Mrs. Paul Magnuson, hatless, her blonde hair in coils over her ears; Mrs. Theodore Dominick in gray tweeds; Mrs. Russell Bishop with a veil binding her hair. Edgar Prina, a twosome; Mrs. Felix de Weldon; Mrs. McCook Knox in dark blue; Mrs. Benjamin H. Lingo; Mrs. Edgar Quayle, and Mrs. Philip Strong and Mrs. L. Mrs. T. N. Sandifer.

Others were Mrs. Emil Hurja and Mrs. Walter Wilds together;

HOWARD MITCHELL, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, and Mrs. Peter Belin, member of the orchestra's Women's Committee, talk things over at the speakers' table at the Symphony Association's luncheon held yesterday at the Mayflower. Berendsens Celebrate New Zealand Day

By Elizabeth Maguire

THE AMBASSADOR of New Zealand and Lady Berendsen gave a party yesterday to celebrate New Zealand Day. If anybody stayed home they weren't missed, because it was like looking for a needle in a haystack to find any one particular friend.

Guests by the hundreds took every inch of floor space in the two drawing rooms, the dining room, reception halls, even the terrace outside and billiard room upstairs.

Sir Carl and Lady Bee did a thoughtful thing in opening wide the doors leading out into the garden, and it was a fine feeling to be in a crowded cocktail gathering with plenty of fresh air. Trees and shrubbery were flooded with colored lights, and bars set up on the terrace were put to good use.

THE HOST AND HOSTESS were down from U.N. in New York just for the occasion. Lady Berendsen looked very charming in an off-shoulder gown of black lace over stiff white net, with a corsage of orchids pinned at the decolletage. In spite of their frequent absence from Washington to attend U.N. sessions in New York, the Berendsens proved yesterday they hadn't forgotten a face or a friend in Washington, as they gave a warm personal greeting to each and every guest.

The dean of the corps, Ambassador Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne of Norway, and Mme. Morgenstierne were there, having returned just a few days ago from their summer vacation in Norway. The Ambassador of Brazil, Mauricio Nabuco, was a guest, as well as the Ambassador of South Africa and Mme. Jooste and the Ambassador of China and Mme. Koo, and the Ambassador of Australia and Mrs. Makin.

AMONG MANY other diplomatic guesst were the Minister of Austria and Mme. Kleinwaechter, the Minister of Finland and Mme. Jutila, the Ambassador of Indonesia and Mme. Sastroamidjojo, the Ambassador of Mexico and Senora de la Colina, the Pakistan Minister, M. O. A. Baig, and the Korean Counselor, Sae Sun Kim, and Mrs. Kim.

Residential Washington included Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Miss Dorothy Tirrell, Mr. and Mrs. Emerson Bigelow, Mme. Vladimir Rybar, Anatole Visson, former Ambassador and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Hamilton, Mrs. Frederick Finkenstaedt, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Gordon Young and Mrs. Parker West.

IN THE ABSENCE of the Polish Ambassador, Jozef Winiericz, who is in New York attending U. N. conferences, Mme. Winiewicz entertained Monday at a luncheon in honor of Czeslaw Milosz, who has been cultural attache of the embassy in Washington for the past four years. Mr. Milosz is a well known poet and is now being transferred as cultural counsellor to the Polish embassy in Paris. The luncheon was attended by members of the embassy staff and their wives.

THE CANADIAN AMBASSADOR AND MRS. WRONG gave a dinner at the embassy last evening to say farewell to embassy staff members who are leaving soon to return to Ottawa. Guests of honor were First Secretary and Mrs. Ralph E. Collins, the Second Secretary and Mrs. J R. Murray and Second Secretary J. M. Cote.

MME. VAN ROIJEN, wife of the Netherlands Ambassador, attended a concert given last evening by five visiting students from the Netherlands. The concert, a string quartet with piano, was held at the International Student House. Erwin van Asbeck played first violin, Miss Mieke de Jong, second violin; Maarten Smit Sibinga, viola; Joost Smit Sibinga, cello, and Miss Cor Berkelbach van der Sprenkel, piano.

Fine Hair Takes Soft Wave Well

Eleventh day of Winifred's beauty program.

By Ann Lawrence

BECAUSE OF HER baby-fine hair, Winifred had always felt that she had to wear it in fluffy ringlets and curls. She believed that it would not take naturally to soft waves and a sleek crown. Then, too, her whole approach to make-up, hair-styling and grooming had been the "pretty-pretty" type, remember?

Today you see her after her hair has been permanent waved and styled especially for her.

Although she had been using a golden rinse, none was applied. For the color of her hair is quite lovely, "au naturel," and the cream-rinse applied after the shampoo served to bring out the natural lights and golden tones. No tint was necessary.

HER HAIR WAS first parted on the left side, then the top layer brushed smoothly over the crown to the right. A gentle wave was pushed in, about one inch above her ears, pulled back and slightly up, then the ends brushed and combed into an upward sweep. There were no ringlets, no tight little curls, no fly-away look.

. . . soft, sophisticated

The left side is even smoother than the right, since this is the finer or "lighter" side of her hair.

The double-tiered bang was achieved with two rows of pin curls, one on top of the other. The lower was curled clockwise, the top layer pinned counter-clockwise. Brushed out, it softened the coiffure, without disturbing the more sophisticated effect for which the hairdresser was striving.

BY REMOVING THE heavy, straight-across-the-forehead bang she had formerly worn, her face lost its "pushed-down" look. The off-center bangs gave enough height to make her face seem more oval.

Tomorrow: A simple suit to slenderize.

New Formula for Pastry Uses Salad Oil; Directions Just Say 'Stir and Roll'

DEAR ANNE:

Can you give me a recipe for making pastry with salad oil? I understand there is a new method for this. A. I. G., Hyattsville, Md.

Yes, the home economics departments of two big milling companies have recently come out with new methods for making pastry this simple way. The following is one of them which does away with the need for rolling out crust in the conventional manner, then cleaning up a messy floured board. Because of the consistency of the dough, you merely roll it between two sheets of waxed paper.

STIR-'N'-ROLL PASTRY
(Double Crust)

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoons salt
½ cup cooking oil (also called salad oil)
¼ cup cold whole milk

Mix the flour and salt together. Then add the oil and milk all at once. (Pour oil and milk into same measuring cup, but DO NOT stir them before adding to try mixture.)

Stir liquids in lightly until mixed. Round up dough and divide in halves. Flatten each half slightly.

Place one half between two sheets of waxed paper (approximately 11 inches square.) Roll out gently until circle of dough reaches edges of paper. If bottom paper begins to wrinkle, turn, roll on other side. Peel off top paper. If dough cracks or breaks, mend by pressing edges together, or by pressing a scrap lightly over tear.

Lift paper and pastry by top corners. They will cling together. Place (paper side up) in 8-inch or 9-inch pie pan. Carefully peel off paper. Gently ease and fit pastry into pan. Trim even with rim.

Roll the top crust in the same way and place over filled lower crust. Trim to rim. Seal by pressing gently with fork or by fluting edge. Snip 3 or 4 small slits near center. Bake about 40 minutes until golden brown in hot oven (425 degrees).

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl Asks Help for Sister, 22, Whose Personality Has Undergone a Dreadful Change; Once Life Loving, She Has Now Become Tearfully Anxious and Withdrawn

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My sister Ann, 22, is one of those girls whom everyone likes, as she is (or was) so friendly, vivacious and cheerful. She always enjoyed life to the hilt and looked for excitement in everything; but now she is in a dreadful state and seems to have lost all desire to live.

Since graduating from high school she has had many jobs, always tiring of them and quitting after a time; but she was fired from the last job, which she didn't much like and didn't try to hold. She was three weeks finding another job, and in that period she changed completely. She got quieter, had crying fits, lost interest in life, looked strained and worried. In company she mixes less and less, and by the end of the evening is completely withdrawn.

She's been brushing me off when I ask what's wrong, but last night when I asked her again she cried so violently that I was frightened. She said she isn't sure what's wrong, but she is terribly worried and too confused to think at times.

When I asked what worries her, she referred to events in her nineteenth year. She used to dress up and go out with some girls, but she wouldn't tell me then where she went or who her companions were. Now she admits they went to the most notorious bars in the city and picked up dates there. She says she did nothing worse than indulge in heavy petting on these parties, and can't explain why she went.

She always has been easily swayed, and I imagine she went because her companions persuaded her it was exciting and a lot of fun. I do believe her when she says she never meant to be, and never was, really bad. But when I assure her that, since she's never been really bad, she has no need to be so distressed, she argues that since dating Dick, she lives in fear that he will find out about her "fling" three years ago. Dick is a fine, clean-cut boy who is happy-go-lucky, and adores her. They started dating recently.

Ann has discussed the whole matter with our pastor, who is a longtime family friend, but he has been of no help, aside from voicing sympathy; and I love and respect my parents too much to burden them with this. They've never ruled us with an iron hand; they've given us love and understanding and a fine example always, and our home always has been frequented by clergy and only the nicest people. Please try to help us, for the need is urgent and we've nobody else to confide in. E. B.

DEAR E. B.: Ann is emotionally sick, very sick, with an overwhelming feeling of being hopelessly isolated from human understanding, or normalcy, or love — sanctuary — a feeling that "goes with" her psychological distress, the nature of which any good analyst would recognize immediately.

She needs psychiatric care at once, administered by an experienced analyst, to help her establish a sure sense of satisfactory communication with a wise, kindly authority who deeply comprehends her moral despair and her emotional needs, and who will guide and support her in exploring the meaning of her depression.

Indirectly your letter reveals that Ann always has been at odds with herself. She is a tremendously uncertain, dependent personality, full of tensions caused by conflicts and inhibitions, the existence of which she hardly suspects — and in that respect she is separated from her inner nature, which is at war with itself, to further complicate matters. Given that stormy, quaking foundation, naturally her character has been unstable, or "easily swayed," to use your words.

Her excitement-seeking pace in the past reflected serious disquietude of spirit, and a compulsive race to escape from self, no doubt. And I daresay her disreputable fling in her 19th year was a part of this pattern, and will be recognized as a symptom of anxiety, and not the cause of her melancholy, as the truth unfolds in analytic conference.

The crux of her despair may be that she secretly, sinfully feels that her natural self inclines to run wantonly contrary to her moral ideal of how she ought to be. Perhaps she has imbibed from home training and religious grounding a perfectionist ideology, ill suited to inherently imperfect human nature. And perhaps, in consequence, she is struggling blindly either to completely attain, or entirely discard, "ideals" that seem (to her conscience) beyond her capacity. This kind of conflict is often at the center of split personality, generating ineffable strain and terror.

In the city through which your letter came there is a city hospital of the same name, which has a neuropsychiatric clinic staffed with nine psychiatrists and other personnel. Clients are received on Wednesday afternoons. Please go there, taking this article as introduction if you like, and beseech the director, or his representative, for first hand help in steering Ann to the appropriate specialist. M. H.

On the Town

By Georganne Williamson

THE WARDMAN'S Caribar Room is offering an orchestra revue that is doubly famous. Ernesto Lecuona, pianist and composer of popular Latin works such as "Malaguena" and "Ballet Suite for Pan America," would be drawing card enough to fill the Caribar Room.

But in addition to his classical musical work, he has been developing for the last 20 years a crack group to present floor shows and his own ideas of Latin music. They have appeared throughout Europe, South America and North America. In concert engagements they have been teamed with Maurice Chevalier, Mistinguette, Josephine Baker. Night clubs include the Bal Tabarin and Hotel Claridge in Paris, Palais dela Mediterranee, Grand Casino, the Casino Bellevue in southern France.

Their list of triumphs goes on: 12 grand prizes, command performances for Baron Rothschild, Edward, Prince of Wales, President Prado, Darcy Bargas. Films and recordings wherever they went.

It's obvious that these "Lecuona Cuban Boys" have things all sewed up. As for their style—I'm told they "delight discriminating audiences" with a "marvelous show" of "exciting rhythms." More realistically, they no doubt do represent an outstanding musician's ideas of the best expression of Latin American music.

The Lecuona Cuban Boys arrive tomorrow night, and Washingtonians can judge for themselves for the next several weeks. Dinner and dancing start at 8 p. m.; floor shows are at 9:30 and 11:15.

LOCAL BEAUTY and talent are getting a hometown chance at Matt Windsor's Windsor Room. He has eight singing brunettes presenting a veritable recital of combinations and types of songs. Each of the girls now lives in Washington.

June Beverly is already known to Windsor Room patrons. An excellent singer, and with a pronounced talent in pen and pencil art work, she still wants to be a school teacher because she "likes it best." So Windsor Room engagements are just a sideline while she goes to Wilson Teachers College.

Other performers may be stenographers, models or housewives. Diane Jayson, who works at the Pentagon, specializes in the cute, table-to-table type of number, such as "Gimme a Little Kiss." She's small and cute herself—hails from Brooklyn along with June Beverly.

Lattice Radcliff is from North Carolina, a good enough reason to specialize in hillbilly music. After moving to Washington, she persuaded Nanci McCaleb, of Silver Spring, to try out some hillbilly duets which they sing at the Windsor Room.

Beverly Beckett has a lyric soprano voice and concentrates on musical comedy numbers.

Women Aren't Men

This provocative statement titled a series of articles written by Agnes Meyer, which appeared in The Washington Post this summer (through the courtesy of the Atlantic Monthly, which published the articles initially in its August, 1950, issue).

The series excited a great deal of comment, and The Post received numerous requests for copies of the articles. In response to these requests, this discussion of the status of American women in modern society has been reprinted in booklet form.

The booklet is on sale in The Post lobby, and can also be obtained by sending 10c to The Washington Post Promotion Department, Washington 4, D. C.

Two at 'The Barrier'

Tibbett, Muriel Rahn Star In Music Drama at Gayety

Langston Hughes Play Adapted From His 'The Mulatto'

By Richard L. Coe

ALTHOUGH Muriel Rahn is superb vocally and histrionically, there is less in "The Barrier" than meets either eye or ear.

The altogether disappointing new musical drama at the Gayety which returns Lawrence Tibbett to the stage after his distinguished career at the Metropolitan is a contrived story adapted by Langston Hughes from his play, "The Mulatto."

It is a grimly determined effort at opera in English. However successfully Gian-Carlo Menotti has shown, in his own words and music, that there can be such a fusion and however patient one may strive to be with this new collaboration, the result is simply phoney. Music Critic Paul Hume tells you about the music in the adjoining column.

The story concerns a Georgia colonel whose only children have been born of his Negro housekeeper. He has educated the eldest son up North, but when the latter strives to take anything other than what his father considers his "rightful place with the niggers," the colonel rages. When the son is ordered to leave the house and decides to go out the forbidden front portico, the colonel tries to shoot him. The son strangles his father to death.

The final scene shows the mother remembering the events of 30 years before which led to her mulatto brood

In the first place, I don't believe such a story in the least. It presumes, from the first scene to be of the present, but I didn't for a minute believe that. From the dancers' costumes of the last act, one assumes that 30 years before was in the crinoline days. Hence, the ballet, which presumably is clarifying the story, only confuses.

Clumsy Arrangements

In the second place, the fitting of words and action to the music has been clumsily arranged. There are jerky pauses where everyone freezes while the orchestra saws on. The recitative form is intensely artificial and unconvincing, a criticism that can't be fairly levelled against "The Medium" and "The Consul," those works which I assume encouraged this production.

Nor is there much the supporting figures, other than Miss Rahn, have to do. Mr. Tibbett is called on to strike poses and Wilton Clary, as the eldest son, can do little more than stand about and sing brusque phrases. Co-Producer Michael Myerberg directed, rather helplessly it seemed to me.

It is a shame that Miss Rahn has to waste her vital skill in such an aimlessly arty work as this. Her moments of appeal come so close to striking home, both as an actress and a singer, but are so patently far above her material that an ovation for her at the fall of the curtain seemed superbly suitable. It is a part far from the insinuating liveliness of her "Carmen Jones" but with it she strikes the only convincing notes of a sordid, depressing evening, enlivened minutely by the spoken words of two dreary undertakers.

For a discussion of the Jan Meyerowitz score, Mr. Hume carries on in the next column and I don't envy him his assignment.

Jan Meyerowitz Music Is Integral Part of New Work

By Paul Hume

THE real barrier at the Gayety, where Langston Hughes' liberatto is being sung to music by Jan Meyerowitz, is Mr. Meyerowitz's music.

In the adjacent column by Mr. Coe, you will discover something about the play. This column is concerned with the weaknesses of the music.

The text of the "musical drama," as "The Barrier" is being called, is eminently singable, frequently containing beautiful poetry, and is composed largely of short, simple words.

The trouble with the music, taken as a setting of that text, is that those short, simple words are stretched out of shape, pulled and twisted to fit a tedious, unoriginal style of matching words and music.

Meyerowitz remembers many of the techniques that made Menotti's "The Medium" a unique and fascinating piece. But he has mastered none of them, and has none of his own to offer in their place. The bloated score moves from threadbare jazzy figurations to trite imitations of late European symphonists with appalling monotony. Worst of all, it fails to match the music to dramatic climaxes, or to change color with the changing moods of the play.

First Dance Touching

There are rare moments of relief from this unhappy state of things. Miss Rahn's soliloquy, reminiscing about happier days, wherein she is joined by Mr. Tibbett and Charlotte Holloman singing offstage, has lyrical passages. For these, the composer has gone to Benjamin Britten's operatic success, "Peter Grimes," an even finer model than Menotti.

But to ask such fine singers as Muriel Rahn, Tibbett, and Miss Holloman to wear themselves out on badly written phrases, is to abuse good singing actors. Miss Rahn sounded wonderful throughout, and Miss Holloman's voice should make her a familiar favorite.

Tibbett had moments of rich sound that brought back his years as one of the Metropolitan Opera's chief ornaments. At other times, he had difficulty in projecting the unwieldy music.

Dance sequences, designed by Charles Weidman and Doris Humphrey were touching, notably in their first scene. The dancing on the main stage lost some of the point the first scene held. Marc Breaux and Josephine Keene were excellent in those sequences.

Do not think of "The Barrier" as an opera and then announce that you do not like opera. Whether it is opera, musical drama, or a play with music, it suffers, as operas, musical dramas, and plays with music often have suffered in the past, from an inadequate musical score.

Lone Veteran At Reunion of Confederates

BILOXI, Miss., Sept. 26 (U.P.).—The 80-piece U. S. Navy Band today played marches that sent Southern warriors into battle 85 years ago, but only one Confederate veteran was on hand to hear.

Of 22 Confederate army survivors, only Gen. James W. Moore, 99, of Selma, Ala., the commander-in-chief, was able to attend the annual veterans' reunion here.

Moore was surrounded by delegates attending the Sons of Confederate Veterans convention, but he said missed seeing his old buddies. It appeared likely there would be no more reunions.

General Moore said he enlisted in the Confederate army at the age of 13 and was put in the commissary outfit of Gen. Joe Wheeler's cavalry. He took part in the battles of Shelbyville and Murfreesboro.

Oath Is Opposed By Swarthmore College Faculty

SWARTHMORE, Pa. Sept. 26 (AP).—The faculty of Swarthmore College has adopted a resolution opposing the policy of requiring faculty members to sign a loyalty oath.

The resolution was adopted last night by the 14 teachers present for the opening faculty meeting of the year. It called such oaths a "threat to the principal of academic freedom." The resolution affirmed support of teachers at the University of California who were ordered discharged for refusing to sign a loyalty oath.

Prof. Frank Pierson of the economic department said the Swarthmore resolution does not support California University faculty members not cleared by their own colleagues.

The resolution declared that "this threat to the principal of academic freedom must not go unchallenged."

New Device Measures Watch Radiation

NEWARK, N. J., Sept. 26 (U.P.).—An instrument sensitive enough to measure the harmless radiation of a wristwatch dial or the deadly quantity in an atomic bomb explosion is in production, the Westinghouse meter division announced today.

Named the universal Roentgen meter, the instrument is the measuring part of radiation detection devices being built by other American manufacturers. The three-inch-square meter, which weights less than one pound, is being built into portable radiation detection devices.

Super-Nylon Claimed

FRANKFURT, Germany, Sept. 26 (U.P.).—Polish research scientists have produced a synthetic fiber called "steelon," claimed to be superior to nylon, three to five times stronger than any vegetable fiber, and resistant to weather fluctuations, bacteria, and fungi, the Polish agency P.A.P. reports. Base of the product is coal tar.

The bath house at the swimming pool is in the style of the main house. There are 3 sets of farm buildings, with housing for the farm help. The brick stable is worthy of the finest horses, and is designed so that it can be converted to a dairy barn if desired. One of the most attractive features about this farm is its frontage on the beautiful Shenandoah River. Though it is clear of debt, illness in the owner's family brings it on the market at the reasonable price of $100,000. Shown by appointment by

'Beauty After Forty'

Middle-Agers: Watch 'Middle'

(This is the third article in a series written for women in the neighborhood of 40—and beyond—by an expert in her field. Mrs. McLeod founded the Elizabeth Arden School, has written many books on beauty and diet. These articles are from her latest book, "Beauty After Forty," just published by Garden City Press.)

By Edythe Thornton McLeod

Normal adults must have enough "fuel" in the form of calories—sugar, starches and fats—for the internal and external work of the body.

There must be sufficient proteins to repair the wear and tear on tissues, and to supply energy. There must be calcium and phosphorous to build and to repair bones and teeth.

Iron, copper, and other minerals build and repair red blood cells and vitalize tired parts of the body. Vitamins are also necessary to promote health and resist infection and disease.

Your age, weight and activity determine the amount of these nutrients which are considered adequate.

As women grow older their weight increases. This is completely normal. Between the ages of 30 and 50 the increase in weight for short women is about 13 or 14 pounds, for tall women about 15 pounds.

Research reveals that this weight increase is brought about by consuming the same amount of food as before, while exercise is less.

High blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, gall bladder disease, and chronic diseases of the heart, kidney, and blood vessels are extremely high, percentage-wise, in overweight. It is an established fact that high blood pressure is often relieved by reduction in weight.

Exercise is what you always plan to do, but never do. . . . Women over 40 should be very careful about exercising. Unless it is done under the supervision of an exercise teacher, or is prescribed for you and your particular condition by your doctor.

Proper, planned-for-you-and-your-special-condition exercises, plus food control, are excellent. You can, by the use of both, reduce your waistline and lengthen your lifeline.

This Seven-Day Diet is not revolutionary. There are no trick foods or trick food combinations. But if you are "fed up" with a heavy diet, if you want to slim down, or recondition your system after a period of overeating, the Seven-Day Diet will get results.

Here is "After 40" diet:

Anderson Denies He Is Taking Over Boyle's Party Job

By the United Press

Senator Clinton Anderson (D., N. M.), moved yesterday to quash any speculation that he expects to take over command of the Democratic national organization.

Democratic National Chairman William M. Boyle, jr., hospitalized by an internal disorder, announced Monday the appointment of Anderson as executive vice chairman to help out in the Congressional election campaign. Anderson also is chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee.

From Albuquerque, N. M., Anderson wired his office that he is "only going to work under Mr. Boyle on things he thinks I should worn on."

"Mr. Boyle is still chairman and going to remain that," Anderson said. 'All I am going to do is to follow out ideas and suggestions that we already have discussed since we have been working together."

Not Hollywood

The Real TV Stars Are in New York

By John Crosby

"STARS OVER HOLLYWOOD" is the latest of the programs filmed especially for television in Hollywood and has all the conspicuous weaknesses of the others. In the first place, "Stars Over Hollywood" is a misnomer, like its counterpart, "Fireside Theater," a Bing Crosby enterprise, which also films TV shows on the West Coast, and has produced no genuine stars, in fact, no name actors of any importance at all. (Leading role in the one I mentioned was filled by Gloria Saunders, whoever she is.)

Crosby

If you want to look for genuine stars on television, you'll have to look in New York. Regularly broadcasting from New York are Ed Wynn, Eddie Cantor, Fred Allen, Milton Berle, Jimmy Durante, Don Ameche, Danny Thomas, Frank Sinatra and many others. Irregularly broadcasting—that is, commuting East for television guest spots, or single performances as stars of individual shows—will be Bob Hope, Joan Caulfield, Luise Rainer and Veronica Lake. And that's a very incomplete list.

NEW YORK can command the services of the biggest screen and radio names, whereas Hollywood can't seem to command any at all. The marquee value of a name is not something I take very seriously, but in this case it illustrates a Hollywood attitude that is going to do it no good. All the TV productions emanating from Hollywood are slipshod. The actors seem insufficiently rehearsed; the quality of the writing is painfully bad; the casting seems to have been done out of card catalogues; and the direction, to put it mildly, is superficial.

The main idea seems to be to cut costs to the bone. And this is a very real problem in Hollywood, because film studio costs are high. But the attitude appears to be: "Get it in the can. You can sell a half-hour of film, no matter what's on it, on television."

Well, that's true enough. But then, in the early days of the movies, you could sell almost any film footage to the movie theaters, too. The situation is changed. Hollywood is gambling with its own prestige by showing so openly its contempt of television and the television audience. The New York TV drama programs are selecting great books, fine plays, even fine movies—then casting, rehearsing and directing them as well as they know how. Hollywood could easily compete in every department. But so far, it hasn't shown the desire to do so.

INTIMATIONS of the Revolution: My three-year-old son, whose life span is almost exactly that of commercial television, deserted the set the other night right smack in the middle of "Howdy Doody" and demanded that someone read to him. Took quite a while to find a book.

ON "LIGHTS OUT," the NBC-TV show, a couple of weeks ago, a disfigured playwright locked himself in a tenement of an office to write a play. He created a couple of characters, as playwrights do; but these characters, unlike those of, say, Robert E. Sherwood, instantly sprang into existence in his dirty little office.

I bring it up now because the device of authors creating characters who suddenly loom up in front of the typewriter had better be given a rest for a while.

Have You Ever Gotten Lost on Glebe rd?

More than a hundred area ministers attending the annual Fall Retreat at Mount Olivet Methodist Church in Arlington, Va., Monday, may be interested to know why there was a sudden change in the scheduled program.

The Rev. George M. Docherty, who came here from Scotland recently to become pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, was scheduled to give the principal address at 11:15 a. m.

But when that time came and went without any sign of Mr. Docherty, President Edward B. Willingham, pastor of the National Baptist Memorial Church, shifted an afternoon speaker into the period, and arranged for Mr. Docherty to speak in the afternoon.

Sure enough, about an hour late, Mr. Docherty finally arrived. And the reason for his delay came as no surprise. New to the area, he had lost his way.

"These Virginia roads!" sighed one observer. "It's a good thing the Lord was with him, or he might not have made it at all."

MISCELLANY

The telephone number for "National Defense" hasn't been Republic 6700 ever since June, but I'm just finding it out. It's now Liberty 5-6700—and Defense is the only subscriber on the new Liberty exchange. . . . Tim Wilson of 1208 Ingraham st. nw., says he wishes he had the number of the Capital Transit motorman who spotted a woman running for his streetcar just as the car was leaving 14th and Decatur. "He not only stopped to wait for her," writes Tim, "but when the sudden stop staggered a passenger standing up front, the operator courteously apologized to him—as polite as you please." . . . Arthur Clarendon Smith, whose slogan "Don't Make a Move Without Calling Smith" is familiar to all Washingtonians, is slated for nationwide publicity via one of the big magazines in an upcoming issue. . . . Dot Jones of 7501 Arden rd., Cabin John Park, Md., reminds you that if you want to enter your pooch in the Rock Creek Kennel Club show on October 15, you've got to mail your entry by this Sunday. Blanks are available from Mrs. Jones (Wisconsin 3064) or from Mrs. George Adams of 5325 38th st. nw. (Emerson 3030) and Mrs. Russell Little of 2324 40th st. nw. (Ordway 8683). . . . Speaking of dogs, I guess rules were made to be broken. I usually list Give-Aways, not "Wants," but this is for a serviceman who doesn't get his mail edition in time to claim a pet. He's William F. Klinqebiel, VX4 U. S. Naval Air Station, Patuxent River, Md., who'd like to have a dog of some kind—collie, cocker, chow, sheep or any breed that would make a good watchdog for his family, which lives 17 miles from the base. If you have a pup to give, drop him a line and he'll come and and get it. . . . And if you have an old piano you'd like to get rid of, I know a Displaced Person who used to teach mathematics and engineering in Czechoslovakia and, thanks to Hitler, today holds such a menial position in Washington that he can't afford the "luxuries" that used to make life worthwhile. . . . Josephine Wedemeyer of 7400 Rhode Island ave., College Park, Md., asks: "Who served as a model for the fellow who designed our bus seats—Frankenstein?" . . . After the conclusion of a recent performance of "Faith of Our Fathers," the stagehands put on a parody of the show, with the cast out front as "audience." It was a howl. The "director" in the take-off version "conducted" with a huge searchlight instead of the usual flashlight. . . . Newscaster Gunnar Back says "Our local papers may not have carried that United Press dispatch about the Korean Commies who wanted 'surrender tickets,' but you'd have heard it if you'd have listened to my broadcast that day." . . . And our News Desk tartly adds: "You'd have seen it in 'a local paper' if you'd have read your Washington Post that morning." . . . Oh, well, I've got a perfect excuse. I can always claim it happened while I was on vacation.

Food Piles Up on Federal Shelves

By Drew Pearson

It's a paradoxical fact that, while the Government has been cracking down on war hoarders, the Agriculture Department has been breaking all records for hoarding. Since the Korean war, the Agriculture Department has hidden away in caves another 47,200,000 pounds of cheese, 30,200,000 pounds of butter and 16,700,000 pounds of dried eggs.

Pearson

This, remember, is all since the Korean war started. On June 29, just after the Korean invasion, Secretary of Agriculture Brannan wrote a letter to the chairmen of the House and Senate Agriculture Committees, suggesting that Congress authorize him to pay for freight and packaging of surplus food to relief agencies. This was proposed as one method to get rid of surpluses. However, the Senate declined to act. Meanwhile, food costs have been skyrocketing.

Purpose of this Government hoarding was supposed to stabilize farm prices. Yet the artificial shortages, on top of the war crisis, have created a crisis at the corner grocery store.

As a result, not only the housewives but the Army, too, is paying more for butter, eggs and cheese. What this means is that the taxpayers are boosting the prices that they, themselves, must pay to feed the Army. Meanwhile, total surplus food stocks have climbed to 191,800,000 pounds of butter; 110,595,296 pounds of dried eggs, 106,100,000 pounds of cheese; 320,700,000 pounds of dried milk; 52,623,504 pounds of Mexican beef and the almost unbelievable figure of three billion pounds (3,052,500,000) of grain sorghum.

Much of this stored food is likely to become moldy and rancid, yet people are hungry from lack of food in many lands.

Note—The Agriculture Department also has 7,500,000 pounds of rice in storage. This could go much further than bullets to win the peace in Korea.

Feud Hits Children

The world's underprivileged children will get no money from the United States — all because of a Tennessee feud and because Wisconsin's well-intentioned Senator Alexander Wiley got so bombastic that he woke up feudist Senator Kenneth McKellar.

Since the children's aid measure was not on the Senate schedule, the rules provided that it could not pass without unanimous consent. This was requested by Tennessee's junior Senator Estes Kefauver and was just about to be granted. But suddenly Nebraska's Senator Kenneth Wherry broke in, explaining he had no objections but wanted an explanation of the bill first.

Wiley offered to make the explanation and got all wound up in his own oratory. Kefauver pulled at Wiley's coattail a couple of times to shut him up, but the Wisconsin Senator boomed on and on.

His speechmaking finally woke up the Senate's grandpa, McKellar of Tennessee, who had been dozing in his seat. Disturbed, he grumpily began whispering around to find out what was going on, learned that Kefauver was behind the bill. That was enough. Aid to thousands of children made no difference. McKellar hates Kefauver so ferociously that he won't even allow his staff to mention Kefauver's name.

So, after Wiley's eloquent speech, McKellar snorted: "I am compelled to object and I do object."

The stunned Wiley explained that the children's aid bill had already been approved in principle by McKellar's own Appropriations Committee. But the surly Senator from Tennessee mumbled that his committee had been given the "run-around." Then, in a tone indicating he didn't wish to discuss it any further, he rasped again: "I am compelled to object."

That ended it. There will be no aid to children despite the huge amounts of food stored in our caves and warehouses.

White House Baths

When the new White House is completed in December, 1951, the President and his family for the first time in history will have enough bathrooms.

In fact, the only major change in rehabilitating the sagging White House will be the addition of eight new bathrooms. A total of $5,500,000 is being spent, but this will be the only real addition to the new building.

Discreet inquiries by the renovation commission into White House papers and memoirs reveal that Presidents and their guests often had to pad down the halls in their slippers or bare feet searching for an empty bathroom. Furthermore, the first "inside" bathroom was not put in the White House until 1850. Prior to 1850, the President had to go outside.

There is one other change—the White House bomb shelter. It will be strong enough to withstand anything but a direct hit by a powerful bomb.

Under the Dome

Just before ferocious Senator Langer collapsed from filibustering against the Communist bill, he banged his desk so hard that a sleeping page boy fell off his chair. Senator Humphrey of Minnesota saw that Langer was growing pale, and whispered to him to quit. Langer whispered back: "You go home and go to bed and get yourself some sleep. I am good for several hours" . . . House page boys will be kept on the payroll until Congress reconvenes November 27. However, Senate page boys will have to take their vacation without pay . . . There was a good reason why Senators Douglas of Illinois and Lehman of New York hid their faces behind newspapers and broke into a run when photographers accosted them right after the Senate filibuster. They had been tipped off that the Republicans planned to frame them by planting Communists alongside, then snapping pictures.
